Everything

Senior Powderpuffrunners up, Nick Loar, Ben Jones, and Ryan Dorgan, shoot some smiles with their cans of money for the Hurricane Katrina relief effort.

A Penn football player holds up his helmet after a victory at Freed Field.

The tradition of the seniors wearing togas during fall spirit week was captured out by the practice football field from Mary B. Nicolini's Gold 1 Astrophysicology class. Anthony Heinemann was unpictured because he snuck away before the picture was snapped.

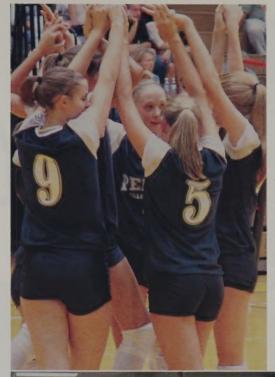

The girls' golf team gather after winning the State championship.

Colorguard girls practice for their upcoming competition.

Amy Rice's textiles and fashion technology students sewed over 100 comforters for survivors of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita. This one says "Made with love @ Penn H.S. Mishawaka, Indiana."

Along the path that leads us to where we stand at the end of the year, we learn the way to live our lives. Starting off as freshmen and moving through to our senior year, we experience almost every feeling that a human possibly can. We're forced to live up to certain expectations that we have absolutely no control over. Through friendships, relationships, the pressure to do well in school, and the high school drama that exists everywhere, we learn the way to cope in our lives. It's said that high school is the best four years of our life. In the end, even though we may think we had it the worst, some of our best experiences will reside in the halls of Penn High School. The memories that will stay with us will be everything you never expected.

The volleyball team comes into a huddle before the second match. Team spirit is very important with the Senior student council members Angela Shan and Elizabeth Traxler dressed up as Teenage Mutant Ninja Turtles for superhero day during homecoming week.

Senior Glenn Inks hammers the frame at the Building Trades house. The class builds a house throughout the year that gets auctioned off at the end of the year. Previous years' houses sold for at least $150,000.

Everything You Never Expected

Sophomore Dalila Allen concentrates on her sewing task. Sewing is a popular class because it gives the student the ability to use their imaginations to create their own fashion.

Seminar is a combined class of U.S. History honors and English 11 honors. Juniors Ty Graham, Sara Dalke, and Sara Meade discuss a difficult piece of literature in a small group to get a better understanding of it.

OU

Lexi Ryan, junior, presents her government plan of Penn High School in black day Seminar.

Ethan Noel, sophomore, looks back for a picture as he cares for his iguana in his Animal Science class. "Animal Science animals," he said.

is an amazing experience Best friends, Karissa because we get to care Henning, freshman, and for different types of Naintara Mahmood, junior, pose for a picture during fitness class. Having close friends in high school makes your experience that much better.

"All for one and one for all!" is the motto for these four musketeers. Junio Sarah Obren, and sophomores Ben Fuj Brenton Abram-Copenhaver, and Shar Miller performed the Barry Kornhaus version of the play Cyrano.

Throughout the four years that we spend wandering the chaotic hallways, attending the challenging and relaxing classes, searching for friends in high and low places, we learn about who we are. The journey we endure redefines us, building our character. As we bustle up the hallways through the sea of bodies we encounter many conflicts that we are forced to deal with. It leaves us wondering who we can fall back on and who truly is our friend. Each person at Penn is different, all contributing part of their uniqueness to the rest of the student body. We learn from everyone. Throughout out these years we have learned to accept every struggle with confidence and reassurance of an acceptable outcome. We have learned that high school is everything we never expected.

Dan Brennan, senior, carries a snake around his shoulders while in his second block black day Animal Science class.

Sophomores Dana Stevens, Erin Crawford, Jenny Behrens, Sarah Hutchings, and Sophie Lauer work as a group in a project for English. "Working in groups is a great way to see other people's perspectives," enthusiastically explains Stevens.

Laura Fagerman, senior, and David Coleman, junior, star in the studio theater play The Foreigner. This three night performance was a huge success.

Everything You Never Expected

Junior Miel Sundararajan studies her chemistry II experiment. Chemistry II is a good class to take if a student plans on going into any medical field.

Drum majors Kerry Rutkowski, Elisabeth Etner, Kate Munsey and Wes McGinnis await the judges' decision at the State finals in the RCA Dome in Indianapolis.

Never

Seniors Dustin Zachary

Juniors Blake Vandevoorde and Natasha Trozzolo listen to the Star Spangled Banner during their Mock Election in US History.

Days come and go, and before we know it we're coming up on our second semester finals, studying and taking them, and then beginning the walk to graduation. What now? Summer is about to start; some students are either going on family vacations and relaxing, but for almost all of them, it's time to get a summer job. After commencement, many seniors are starting to focus on leaving for college and saving for the next four years. Others are planning to start working and living on their own, or joining the armed forces. Yet, no matter what, it all comes back down to friendships and fun times that occur over the warm summer months. The days and nights of being with friends will be logged into our minds and hearts even after the warmth has died away. We've lived everything we never expected.

Junior Alex Pajakowski seems to be glowing as he works on welding a piece of metal. This room is hidden back behind the PNN Studio, and not many students have stepped foot in its confines.

Junior Laureen Foulks concentrates on her sculpture project. Many creative ideas were thought of for this project, and Foulks decided to create a sculpture of a head.

Seniors Gesi Aho-Rulli and Ryan Dorgan pose on one of the dress up days for winter homecoming. Their pirate obsession was captured and framed.

Everything You Never Expected

Junior Sara Snyder executes a perfect pass as she metamorphoses from caterpillar to butterfly. "What I found a bit disconcerting," assistant principal Steve Hope said, was after they emerged from their cocoons, they picked up rifles."

Annie Bernacchi, Megan Reece and Allie VanHyfte, all sophomores, meet in their literature circle to discuss the reading for the day.

> Participating in a Bands of America competition gave the Penn Marching Band a new perspective on performing. They competed at Miami University in Oxford, Ohio, in the fall.

Senior Justin Hill helps clean up the gym after the successful pep session in the fall. Active in Student Council, Hill also sings in Chamber Choir, works two part-time jobs, and carries a heavy course load--who's got time to sleep?

"Yo, ho, yo, ho, the pirate's night, Bryan Keve life for me. . ." senior keeps dry with parents Jeff Wojcicki adjusts his Karen and Edward. eyepatch to read a text in class.

On a rainy senior

"Et tu, Calvin?" Members of the group--Sarah Popovich, Karen Brabec and Matild Dosa-- muse before school with Calvin Molnar, who sports a multicolored jester hat (complete with jingle bells!)

Symphonic II trombonists (Devin Hillsdon-Smith, Adam Marsh, Jason Schmidt and Brendan Reeder) rehearse for the winter concert.

Sophomores Katrina Cichoracki, Michael Buckenmeyer, Hailey Rockwell and Joe Sharkey sit in the highest row of the sophomore section at the fall pep session.

Senior Emily Martin has been playing guitar for two years. She likes to play "La Bamba" on her fire-engine-red American-made custom Stratocaster, getting lost in the music.

Sophomore Student Council member Elissa Gennicks helps make the fall pep session a success.

Olivia Walsh, Samantha Weaver, Elizabeth McKenzie and Christina Clark bow in unison at the December orchestra concert. Walsh and Weaver are freshmen and McKenzie and Clark are juniors.

When music is playing, the girls in the new hiphop club dance with all they've got. But when the music stops, the fun does not. This club gave some an opportunity to meet new people and to make new friends.

Sophomore Rachel Newman lifts her foot in preparation for the next dance move. DDR requires constant focus to nail each move.

Who's in charge here?

"Hip-hop dancing is a different style, it's movin', droppin', tickin', and footwork." joked Victor Kamwendo, senior.

Senior Billy Batson, second in state for DDR, says, "It is good exercise and it's fun to hang out with friends."

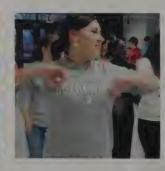

"It gives everyone an opportunity to shake their 'laffy taffy,' laughs Mediha Penic, senior.

Sophomore Joe Fitzhugh says, "We're obsessed with it! We even got Mr. Schmidt to dance with us."

"We started this club because this school needs more variety. We wanted a little 'flava'," Brittany Lawson, senior, explains.

What's HOT This Year?

Looking for something fun to do?

Penn students tell us what entertains them

"I always make time for America's Next Top Model. It's like Real World meets American Idol." Danielle Fanslow, senior

"I would love to spend the day with Mariah Carey. She's got a great voice and a great body." Henry Zhang, senior

"The best concert? Coldplay. It took two hours to set up their stage, but it was definitely worth the wait!" Taylor Shirk, junior

"Halo 2 is the best video game-it's hard to explain why...it just is." Nate Freeman, junior Sophomore Jorja Rhoda watches the big screen for her next movements in this year's Dance, Dance Revolution club. Dance, Dance Revolution, otherwise known as DDR, is a fast paced game with upbeat songs and complicated steps. In this game you have to be quick to match your feet with the arrows as they fly across the screen.

"I'm always listening to "Dirty Little Secret" on my iPod. The All American Rejects are, like, the Paige Kelly, sophomore

"I use my PSP to listen to music and to look at pictures." Austin Shafer, sophomore

"I like the Gossip Girl series of books. It really shows how girls in high school treat each other." Haley Miskin, freshman

"One movie I have to see is King Kong. Because I like monkeys. Jack Black." Nick Buck, freshman

Fall Fling

At the recently added Fall Fling dance, there were fun activities and prizes. There was a dance competition as well as a DDR competition.

Freshmen Alex Munsey sits buried beneath her large amounts of purses that she owns.

Kalee Suddarth, senior, got a Strawberry Shortcake doll in a Happy Meal. Stephanie Lacerda, junior, has her cell phone attached to her, "so I can text Kalee during chemistry class."

Lindsey Nyerges, junior, said "I keep this camera in case something interesting happens."

Brant Grzeskowiak, junior, keeps Powerade on hand; in case of dry mouth, he takes a swig.

Christine Wu, freshman, said "I love to stick post-it notes everywhere!"

Russell, Danielle Marchi, carries from class to listen to around a whistle on her keychain.

What's in YOUR bag?

These students carry around some interesting objects!

Sarah Rohacs, senior, explained "Usually teachers let me listen to my iPod after I'm done with my work."

Deborah Wei, junior, always carries a wooden comb in her backpack.

Josh Jenkins, junior, found this apple car freshener on the ground.

Kayla Erlacher, junior, used a yellow blo-pen for a sociology project.

Melinda Goddard, sophomore, proudly displayed her new Martin's trainee nametag.

In a variety of different purses, the reoccuring objects seemed to be gum, ID tags, cell phones and car keys.

Naina Singh, senior, said "All my friends call me the bag lady because I've got almost everything in it, from post-it notes to my hair-straightener!"

Kate Munsey, senior, bought her "Pink Bag" in Rome.

Lauren Olson, junior, said "I love my purse because it's way cute!"

to carry."

Rachel Noveroske, Maddie Glassford, Sarah senior, claimed freshman, loves her junior, carries only "My purse is easy purse because it is the "sparkly!"

Obren. absolute essentials.

Stephanie Strausser enjoys a holiday treat as a student assistant in the guidance office. Sue Campbell, guidance secretary, takes good care of her student assistants. Guidance student assistants run dozens of messages to students throughout the year.

Rachel Noveroske and Katie Kuehl celebrate successful pep session, the first one since their freshman year. The drum line and Coach Cory Yeoman's cheer were highlights of energetic the assembly.

Patrick Oliva and Shannon Nutting focus in their finance class. "Mr. Garrett is awesome so the class is pretty cool," said Oliva.

Becca Essig is shocked and surprised by the oboe she received from the Make a Wish foundation in the fall.

Alyssa Bollinger gets into character in The Foreigner.

Seniors Class of 2006

Wearing the distinctive lightning-bolt scar and round glasses of Harry Potter, Ashika David, Naina Singh, Anthony Heinemann and Angela Shan dress for the premier of the movie version of The Goblet of Fire in November.

Spontaneous Melissa Szweda climbs a snow mound on her way to her car after school. "I can never wake up early enough to get a close parking spot so I end up in softball which is like a mile walk," Sweda explains.

Sophomores

Class of 2008

Monica Irons, Jessica Norris, and Tifanie McDaniel were excited as they waited for the children to be checked into their Child Development class.

> Ashley Sill practiced CPR on a dummy in Greg Dikos' health class.

> Something smelled good in Tim O'Neal, Callie Brey, and Jessica Speelman's kitchen as they cooked ground beef in restaurant management.

Trevor Strefling smiled as he continued working on his project in ceramics class.

Ron Como and Zach Schmucker worked together on a project in Drafting class.

Who said Chemistry wasn't fun? Becky Brueske, Rose Coughlin, Kate Turner and Sandra Ernsberger worked on chemistry problems in Lynda Rose's class.

Freshmen

Class of 2009

Brittany Huffman worked on a quilt in sewing class that was sent to victims of New Orleans' hurricanes.

Danny Yeager had fun assembling his DNA model during a biology rotation. Could we have a future biologist?

Cynthia Thompson and Allyson Knutson played a vocabulary game during French class. "C'est La Vie!"

No, they weren't flying a plane! Christine Wu and Madhura Sundararajan flashed their smiles during a Spanish lesson in the foreign language lab.

Garrett Spencer,
Katie Lawson,
Nick Reynolds,
Max Campbell,
and Claire Guy worked in groups
as they prepared to give speeches in Caelea
Armstrong's
English class. Guy said, "Miss Armstrong gets to know--really know--all her students, and she truly cares about our lives." This must be why AStrong had so many smiling
students in her

Rich Sypel is a well-known algebra teacher. One might know him for his obsession with Star Wars and the White Sox. Others might know him as Mock Trial adviser. Either way he is a exceptional addition to the Penn staff.

Susan Van Fleit helps a student in need of French homework help. Van Fleit is a very understanding and patient teacher. French club, a new club to Penn High School, was started and organized by Van Fleit

Gail Jaskowiak is one of two foods and nutrition teachers and the only restaurant management teacher. You can smell her classes' good cooking all through the technology hallway.

Keith O'Connell, an AP Geography and World Geography teacher, uses humor in his lessons when he lectures in class to make class more interesting. This picture expresses this type of tactic.

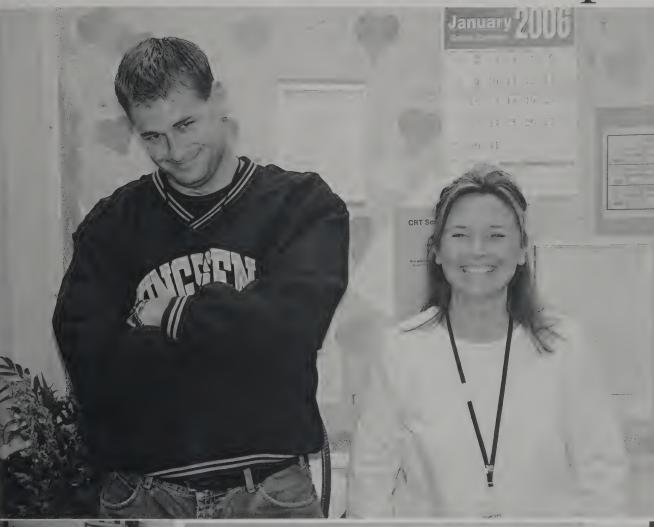

IShelley Wilhelm is a reputable biology teacher. She is known for her mother-like kindness and great teaching skills. Wilhelm followed her father's footsteps in becoming a teacher at Penn High School and it is safe to say that every student here at Penn appreciates seeing her warm smiles every day.

Overworked and underpaid

Pete Riordan and Jodi Adkins are well liked among the students here at Penn High. Riordan is a great addition to the football coaching staff as well as one of the economics teachers. Adkins is a bubbly English teacher that loves taking the time to actually get to know her students. creating friendships that last even after graduation.

Kristen Riggs, a fairly new Spanish teacher, helps sophomores Dave Balentine and John Green with Spanish tic-tac-toe. Don't be confused with dean Kevin Riggs being her husband; he's just a colleague.

Jodi Adkins Thom Andreae Leonor Archias Caela Armstrong Timm Barnbrook Megan Barrett Lynda Bathue Delores Beath Sarah Beehler Charles Beeson Melisa Bennett Dawn Bernaert Laura Biggs Amber Boenne Dawn Boulac Niccole Boush Diane Bowersox Becky Brown JoLynn Brown Linda Burrell Lori Bush Sue Campbell Martha Cary Michele Chlebek Anne Chmiel Steve Ciszczon Candace Clark Paula Corzett Todd Crist Marni Cronk Tom Csenar Karen Czarkowski Peter DeKever Sandra DeWulf Sally Dikos Elizabeth Dix Cheryn Drake Linda Dunlap Sue Duszynski Kerri Dycus Melaney Gabris Sean Galiher Jim Garrett Joanne Gerhart Ragen Graf Sylvia Greenhood George Grzegorek Thomas Guthrie Brenda Hab Jean Hadley Dave Hall Fran Haughee Wendy Hayes William Heimann Sarah Hickle David Hittle

The talent show gave students a chance to show off their best acts and talents. During the show this year, a band called Broken Strings performed three different times throughout the night. The band members are:

Shawn Davis, freshman drums

Tim Thielka, freshman guitar

Jessica Breske, senior lead vocals

Austin Davis, sophomore bass guitar

Allyson Zeyen, freshman keyboard

The Battle is Coming..

Student council members construct large signs that display this year's slogan, Be There! John Verduin's Botanical Bonzai While in years past there have been slogans such as "BOB is coming" and "The Battle is Coming," this has often left students wondering, who is Bob and why is he coming? To help minimize confusion, this year the Battle of the Bands planners decided to go with a more straightforward approach that got the point across right away.

Seniors Alex Sejdinaj and Ryan Dorgan, long time friends and band members from Black Velvet, hang out to support the other bands that were auditioning for the battle.

Junior Adam D. Weaver plays away on his guitar during battle. Music is more than just a hobby for Weaver. "It's different than just playing X-box. It's like I can feel and hear my feelings out loud," expresses Weaver.

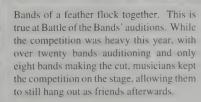

Senior Tom Keranen, bass player for the jazz combo M is for Mingus, is no stranger to the jazz genre of music. Recently Keranen was awarded a scholarship at the Ball State Jazz Festival for Best Bass player of the day. Keranen explains, "I believe that music is really the most intimate and incredible way for someone to express themselves."

Junior Tim Rawlins lit up the stage with a radiant stage performance at auditions. Making the stage his world, he dove right in looking extremely comfortable and prepared.

Juniors Jesse Brewer, Troy Lower, Scott Verduin, Conor O'Toole, Sam Tuthill, Kyle Hilfman, Adam D. Weaver, and Brice Wozniak, also known as John Verduin's Botanical Bonzai, posed after the announcement that they have been voted as the winner of the battle. "Afterwards I felt rad, but I was also tired and wanted to go to bed," explains an exhausted Verduin.

Senior Jenny Hummer pounds out some fat chords on her keyboard. While the band auditioned by simply "jamming," they have quite the interesting song list. It is said to include the popular song "Zak and Sara" by Ben Folds.

Dance like no one is watching

With tryouts for the three poms squads occurring more than six months before their season actually started, the JV and varsity squads spend portions of their summer months preparing for the upcoming fall season. It is evident in their performances that the grueling seven hour a day camp during the summer pays off and helps lead the girls to a successful season. This year's varsity squad had a record number of returning seniors. All nine of the senior girls have developed a tight friendship and have grown together through the years, adding a great deal of leadership and confidence to the squad. The JV squad had three returning juniors with loads of talent and willingness to guide all seventeen underclassmen to a fun season. The JV squad was constantly learning new dances and incorporating new moves into their routines. This year the varsity squad performed a dance nearly three minutes long, which seems like an eternity when compared to the normal, shorter thirty second dances. Despite the longevity of their dance, the squad kept up the intensity and finished strong every time. Both squads performed impressively throughout the season.

Senior Hilary Smith, captain of the varsity poms squad, hits a high V with perfect timing and accuracy. Smith is known for her amazing memory and ability to make up dances. She was an essential member of the squad

The varsity girls are all decked out in their winter gear, ready to perform. Every year the three squads perform a group routine to "Run, Run, Rudolph" for their Christmas dance. Each squad has a different winter theme, and the varsity squad chose to wear hats and scarves.

The JV poms squad enters the gym at half time ready to perform to a Madonna remix. Coach Riggs made up the dance last year, but modified it this year to make it somewhat new for both the squad and the crowd. This dance was a favorite for most of the girls.

The varsity poms squad are "rocking stilettos" during halftime of the boys' varsity basketball game. This dance was choreographed by the entire squad and is much longer than most routines. The dance was very fast paced and intense, but they smiled and hit every motion with precision.

The girls shake their poms at the last home game of the season. There were many freshmen that were new to the squad, which will enable the squad as a whole to grow and improve in the years to come. Seniors Shanna Marsh, Brittany VerHamme, and Alyssa Malott strike a pose at the beginning of the routine "Gold Digger." Each group huddled together doing random motions that made the beginning of the dance catchy and chic. The varsity poms squad also performed this dance at the pep rally.

Freshman Dena Dobrzykowski, and sophomore Ali Dotson stand in ready position waiting for the music to start. Waiting for a dance to begin can be nerve wracking and suspenseful, but the squad always does an outstanding job performing to different themes such as pop, oldies, and salsa.

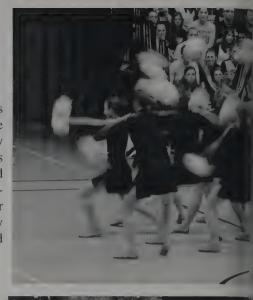

Seniors Kim Walag and Jackie Kondratko show off their medals on senior night. This night was very emotional for the seniors and the coaches. The squad has a record amount of seniors leaving this year, all who had formed good friendships over the last four years dancing together.

Senior Brittany Lawson dances with much intensity on the floor of the Penn Palace. Lawson has been on the competition squad for three years with this being her last year. Lawson was the captain along with Doria Dobrzykowski.

The squad makes strong facials to increase their entertainment value. Facials and smiles can make you or break you in competition. Not enough facials will lower your score dramatically and too many can make the dance look tacky.

The competition squad starts out their routine with random, but strong, poses that go along with their music. They have practiced this dance many times and perfected it in every way; from the tips of their poms to their pointed toes.

After they perform during the pre-game, the varsity Juniors Lindsay Nyergus and Lauren Olson perform and competition squads dance along with the pep band. Sophomore Merideth Abel said, "I like pre-game because it is fun to dance with the varsity squad. It's competition. We've been doing really good this year a fun dance to do together with not as much stress as and I feel like we have accomplished a lot by building our other dance."

The girls all get together, holding their patches, right after placing first in regionals. All of their hard worked paid off. The squad practiced many hours and even did the dance with weights on their ankles to help improve their jumps.

at the "pack the palace" game at Penn. Nyergus said, "This year was a lot of fun and I really enjoyed the relationships through competing."

Junior Kaley Vance smiles big as the crowd watches their performance. Vance said, "The rush of the competition really brought our squad together. There is nothing like the rush of dancing in front of a huge audience."

The whole squad hits their ending pose while dancing at the Penn Palace. Competition Poms travels around Indiana competing against other high school squads for the chance to say that they are the best.

Bringing pages to life

Sophomores Lance Wu, Shiv Singh, and Katie Turner discuss their survival plan before reading Lord of the Flies. They disagreed on whether to concentrate on obtaining fresh water first, or shelter, or food. In many ways, their discussion foreshadowed the trials of Ralph and Piggy and Jack.

Seniors Jenna Story and Nicky Kranc, from Bonnie Manningham's ACP English class, said that they spent a lot of time memorizing their lines and preparing for the performance that they gave to their class and teacher. They both said that all of the preparing paid off as their performance ran smoothly.

Nichole Fundora and Janey Smith, sophomores, assist a young boy at the Bittersweet Library on Dr. Seuss's birthday. The craft area this year was a large hit to the young ones, as it included the making of hats, games and much more. They had an excellent turn out for the event, and thought the kids had a lot of fun.

Seniors Evelynn Lape, Matt Inman, and Kayla Corey act out the play Macbeth in their gold block 3 class. They may be playing the part of the three murders, or they may be playing the three witches, as everyone had multiple roles to act out. Acting out the 400-year old play made it come alive for the seniors.

Senior Derick Neubauer performs the play Macbeth, in Bonnie Manningham's ACP English class. Neubauer played the role of Macduff, the murderer of Macbeth. His costume made the play that much more exciting and realistic, thanks to his mom, who let him borrow her bath robe for the part.

Abby Walton, sophomore, contemplates her topic for her l-Search paper. The sophomore considered researching steroid use in baseball or the Beatles, but finally decided on the designer Coco Chanel. Enrolled in creative writing, Walton will work on yearbook next year and Spectrum her senior year. She can't get enough of words!

Julie Huxford guides freshmen Robert Emery and Nicole Cogdil through the beginning stages of their research. In addition to reading To Kill a Mockingbird and Romeo and Juliet, all ninth graders must also use parenthetical documentation in research. The internet makes research easy, but it is also filled with misinformation, and students must learn to tell the difference.

This is a common thing for many students as they tend to miss test days, but never get away without retaking what they missed. The majority of the teachers alter their retake to make sure that no cheating or advantages to the absent students is taking place.

Mixing it up with science

Sophomores Kyle Beekman and Travis Anderson conduct an experiment in Integrated Chemistry Physics Class, nicknamed ICP. Teamwork and communication are vital parts of working on a lab. Beekman and Anderson are experts.

Sophomore Jenny Lindsay takes notes during a chemistry class. Lots of complex formula manipulation and understanding of chemical reactions is necessary for success in the chemistry classroom. Lindsay's note-taking and organizational skills benefit her greatly and allow her to excel in chemistry and elsewhere.

Brittany Cook studies in preparation for her looming Honors Chemistry quiz. In Laurie Bednarek's class, quizzes are almost daily to make sure students are up to speed. This causes making up classes to be difficult because missing one quiz would make you two quizzes behind. Cook deals with the pressure of making up a quiz very well.

Sophomore Chelsea Bauer reads the directions for he bin ICP class. The class is designed to give stude the foundation for learning in more advanced science class ald in high school and even further in college.

for Christine Cummings dissects a cat in Anatomy class, section is an important part of anatomical science, as it as the students a chance to see animal parts in real life.

Juniors Whitney Cullen, Suzie Stevenson, and Kristi Lafree work on a lab together in Physics Honors. The Physics technology is a step ahead of Chemistry class because Physics students work on the computers and Chemistry students work out of their lab books.

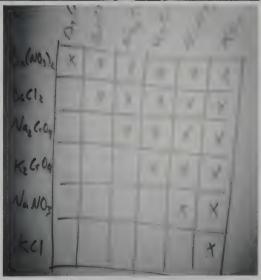

Seniors Sundeep Chennikara and Brent Dunaway show off their lab equipment in Anatomy class. Formaldehyde, latex gloves, and scalpels are just a part of the necessary equipment for following sanitary and safe procedures.

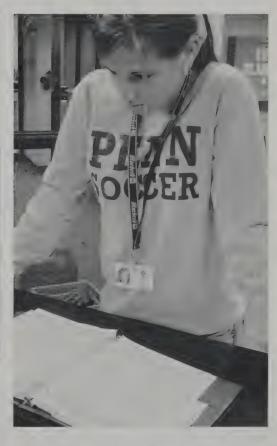

Ser'r Varney Venal and junior Matt Medow work on a cart axi iment in Physics Honors. The purpose of this lab was to axistudents the opportunity to put Newton's Second Law interactice.

Learning chemical reactions can be tough but this chart helps students understand how substances bond in a chemical reaction. This visual learning is emphasized in chemistry at Penn, in addition to the book work and hands-on experimentation which are part of the science curriculum.

Freshman Paige Yost studies biology lab instructions intently as she prepares to experiment on genetics. Experimentation and lab work is a large part of natural sciences, such as biology. This hands-on approach to learning about the world around us is not just effective, but fun as well.

Social Learning

Ben Fuja, Trevor Madlem, and Joe Sharkey, sophomores, stand waiting to be judged by their classmates to see who is best dressed by their squires. Instead of being fitted in a heavy suit of metal, the students recreated what it was like to have to dress a knight by using construction paper and a limited amount of scotch tape as armor.

Danny Williams, Alex North, Andrew Waggoner, Blake VanDeVoorde, and Rob Campbell, juniors, showed off their Pennstock wardrobe. Junior students filled the halls with tiedyed shirts, Afro wigs, and big sunglasses during the two days of Pennstock.

Jim Schmidt taught eager freshmen the fundamentals of World Geography. Schmidt was one of five teachers involved with the first year of the freshman academy. Along with his colleagues (John Kovatch, biology; Faye Krouse, English; Kelly Watts, Spanish; Lisa Bottorff, PE), Schmidt taught five classes of freshmen, reducing the failure rate to seven percent compared to the seventeen percent failure rate of freshmen not involved in the program.

Wes McGinnis and Emily Sauer, juniors, showed off their information booth during Pennstock. Juniors prepared for the event in the weeks leading up to the event, meeting in groups in and out of school. Students who created a booth for Pennstock helped inform other students about their topics through posters and pamphlets that were handed out.

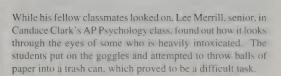

nelsea Bishop and Katie Lamb, sophomores, displayed the ariots they raced in their world history class. "It was fun that a got to experience what it might have been like to be at one the real races, minus the violence," said Bishop.

Kal Waxman has been teaching students for the past 37 years and decided that the class of 2006 would be the last. Waxman taught economics, the class between graduation and seniors, the majority of his career at Penn High School.

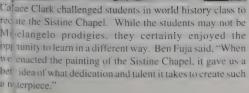

Natalie MacRae and Aleece Weade, juniors, performed at that annual spring event of Pennstock. Pennstock is an event that juniors participated in through their U.S. History class to replicate the famous 1969 Woodstock. Students got involved through performing musical acts, delivering a speech to the audience, or creating an informational booth about issues of that time.

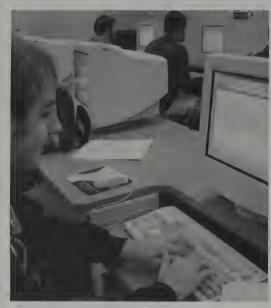

Valarie Wood, Jeri Schifferl, Tiffany Green, Kristie Rzepka, Lindsey Warner, seniors, worked vigorously to design a flag for the island they created. In Government class, the students had the task to set up their own system of government, and dietate what their new nation would do in certain political situations.

Today's students, tomorrow's teachers

Working daily with the computers is part of what Entrepreneurship class is all about. Senior Sean Lewis comments, "Technology is inspiration for future generations, and I have a quote in the yearbook."

Other business courses include computer applications, multimedia, business and personal law, accounting, cadet teaching, and internship. Senior Ty Robbins works on the next screen and jokes, "This class teaches guys like Boo about the real world."

Senior Pat Oliva takes a test during his Finance class. Finance is only a single semester class, meaning Oliva is taking his final test of the class. "The class went well," said Oliva, "the teacher is hilarious and he always gets the job

A Brush of Taleni

Sophomore Kim Stein works on her project in sculpture I-II class. For this project, the students made carved plastic sculptures using different textures, shapes and forms. It is always interesting to see the variety of figures that students at a high school level can create.

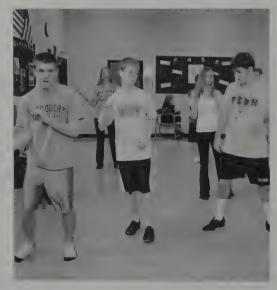

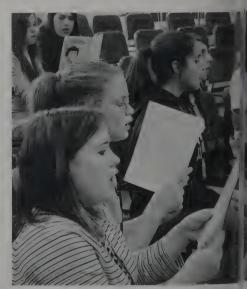

Senior Samantha Tobolski puts the finishing touches on her chair in sculpture class. This chair was based off of Alice in Wonderland. She has put a lot of hard work and effort into creating her work of art. This project is especially unique for the students because they are given the freedom to create anything they want. Allowing the students to be creative and choose what they would like to do makes them take extra pride in their work.

Freshmen Bryan Killelea and Steve Tucker, along with sophomore Bob Lawton, show off their tapping abilities in Denise Honaker's dance class. Many boys are in this class because it helps with coordination, which proves to be helpful with sports. Others just like a change in pace in their academic schedules. Whatever their reasons may be, there is no doubt that dance class is a guaranteed favorite.

Sophomores Katie McKissick, Megan Nichols, and Kate Turner in Girls' Choir rehearse for an upcoming concert. The choirs put a lot of time and effort into making their concerts outstanding. This year the Girls' Choir will be singing numerous songs along with "I Saw Mommy Kissing Santa

Senior Sarah Han sketches out an arch for Visual Communications class. Han stated, "It's fun because I get more time to do my projects. AP Studio Art gives me a heavy work load so this class is a relief."

Freshmen Kyle Kuhlman, Rachel Byrd, JoJo Keranen, and Kaylee Ross, along with sophomores Barrett Indman, Julia Bradford, and senior Ryan Gizewski, pantomime a "picture" in Katie Tyree's theatre class. Each person goes up to the last person and adds on a movement, creating a still picture. This is just one of the many favorite activities that the students have fun and enjoy.

Freshman Bethany Dunlap practices her piece of music for the Penn High School orchestra. The orchestra students are very talented and spend numerous hours preparing for their concerts. Anyone who has seen their concerts knows the level of their passion and hard work that goes in to making their productions masterful.

Junior Danny Williams proudly displays his project in sculpture I-II class. This was one of Danny's favorite classes because he was able to be creative and have fun while working hard and trying something new. The sculptures are one of the things that the students look forward to especially because they can create any type of face that comes to mind.

Reaching New Heights

Senior Anita Geoghan takes a break from her busy morning schedule to show off her smile. Geoghan enjoys the time she gets to spend with her student assistants, even if they are working on school assignments. Being a senior, Geoghan is looking forward to graduation where she can be recognized for all of her hard work throughout the years.

Sophomore Victor Reign and peer leaders Kara Lee, senior, and Lindsay Nyerges, junior, eat lunch during the annual trip to the mall in December. Peer leaders help the students pick out and purchase presents for their families. "We all had a lot of fun and really enjoyed spending the whole day together," explains Lee.

Charlie Olson, sophomore, assists Sarah Beehler in hanging up garland as a part of their holiday decorations. Olson is always ready to lend a helping hand and his presence in the room always brings a smile to everyone's face.

Freshman Evan Preston makes patterns with colored ble with the help of Ryan Oleson. Preston's favorite activ were organizing by color and, surprisingly, doing the dis

Linda Dunlap, senior Kelly Roth and Kathi Sharkey take a break from gym class to rest. Having Roth in class for four years was a joy and it was always nice to see her smiling face in the hallways.

Sophomore David Burnside, freshmen Evan Preston, and Quinn Voorde, along with sophomore Stephanie Marysz board the bus to head to their weekly work at Pasquale Rulli's Pizza. The students take one day a week to offer their assistance to the local business and the Pasquale staff is very grateful for the extra help they get on this day. This weekly trip is a great experience for the students as well as a fun break from school.

Learning the Skills of Life

Sophomores Traci Johnson and Rachel Mills play hot potato with a group of young preschoolers. Mills says her favorite part of the class is "interacting with the kids." She hopes to use the skills learned in child development when she becomes a teacher.

Senior Jennifer Grantz watches sewing teacher Amy Rice teach her how to embroider a special logo for each quilt made in the sewing classes. Each of the five sewing classes had a goal to create 20 blankets per class with a total of 100 quilts. Each quilt was sent to the Hurricane Katrina victims of the Gulf Coast.

Sophomore exchange student Maria Gonzalez poses with a preschool friend during class. When Gonzalez returns to Mexico at the end of the year she will take new knowledge of how to interact with young children learned in child development.

Josh Werntz, junior

Freshman Oscar Redman works on making his wood project just right. Redman took Construction Systems so he would be able to work with the tools they had in class.

Freshman Brent Grove works hard in his Drafting class trying to complete his project on time. Grove took Drafting so he would have a better understanding of technology and computers.

Junior Danny James gets ready to weld two pieces together. James signed up for the Manufacturing class because he wanted to get hands on experience with types of tools.

or Eric Miles wants you to join a technology class! Miles sferred to Penn from Merrillville for his final year of high ool and he really enjoyed his Introduction to Engineering ign class (I.E.D.) taught by Jim Langfeldt.

Freshman Kylie Ross focuses hard in her Animal Science class. Ross enjoyed her first year at Penn and especially her Animal Science class taught by teacher Mel Lenig.

Sophomore Caitlyn Osmer builds on to her project in Tech Lab Seminar. Students in Tech Lab, taught by Brad Robertson, rotate their stations every two weeks to be able to work with as many different computer programs as possible.

Junior Alex Pajakowski focuses intensely on the work in front of him. Students in the Manufacturing Systems class must wear safety goggles and pay full attention to what they are doing especially when working with an open flame.

one Justin Youngs helps out junior Josh Werntz on his one in their Drafting class. Youngs and Werntz have good friends through their use of technology.

No Pain, No Gair

Carroll's mom bought each girl her own apron and sewing teacher Amy Rice then embroidered their individual initials on the upper right hand corner for the special

Senior Gabi McCahill stands in front of her display at the AP Studio Art banquet. McCahill recreated an ice cream parlor to display her artwork from the year, going to lengths such as creating ice cream cones out of styrofoam balls.

Kingsmen Coming Home

Reed Hudson, Steve Huddleston, and Zach Schmucker show their school spirit at the Penn homecoming game vs. the Washington Panthers. "The pep rally got us really crazy and pumped us up for the game," said

Jenny Hummer and Jerry Schultz smile together after being crowned homecoming king and queen. "It was a really meaningful experience. I was thankful to be blessed with it," said Hummer. Schultz said, "It was a privilege to be nominated, but to be crowned king was an amazing honor." Other nominees for king included Travis Uselton, Gesi Aho-Rulli, and Kyle Brey. The other queen nominees were Alyssa Malott, Shannon Summers and Shea Fluegge.

Ashley Grant and Lizzie Zaseck show off their Captain Spirit outfits. As part of homecoming, every day of the week was dedicated to a specific theme. This year we had a 70's day, superhero day, and toga day for the seniors, which was once again a huge success.

Number 46 of the Washington Panthers gets creamed by two Penn Kingsmen. Dr. Dave Tydgat said, "We are going to be ahead 49-0 at half time." Even though that wasn't our score at halftime, that was the final score at the end of the game.

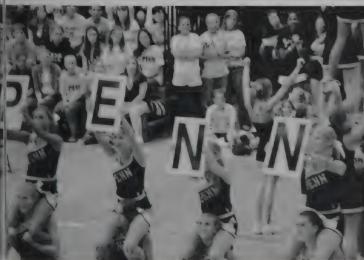

The Penn football team rallies together for a team picture. Student council members Annsa Huang, sophomore, and Megan Veverka, junior, join them to show their school spirit. Seth Hill, sophomore, stated, "It was good to see and hear everybody going wild while we were down on the floor during the pep rally."

Carmen Jackson shows her school spirit by dressing up like Superwoman on superhero day. Jackson stated, "Not that many people dressed up like superheroes so I felt sort of stupid. But it was fun to dress up."

Senior football players, Ben Nehls. Derek Tobolski, Kyle Brey, and Jerry Schultz, pumped up the crowd at the pep rally by stripping their shirts off to show that SENIOR was written across their chest. Tobolski said, "The pep rally was awesome. And showing off our chests really pumped up the ladies in the crowd!"

The Friday night lights were shining, Penn was kicking butt, and the student section was roaring with excitement. Seniors Doria Dorbrzykowski and Christine Lueneburg were cheering along with their friends while Penn was winning against Washington 49-0.

Freshmen cheerleaders hold up P-E-N-N to the shouting crowd of students at the pep rally during fourth block the day of the homecoming game. This was Penn's first pep rally in many years. The student body was extremely excited and showed their enthusiasm by competing in a shouting contest.

Girls can do it, too!

The senior girls and their coaches "team it up" after their final victory vs. the junior girls. It was a very intense game for the senior girls, so the victory was well deserved. Powderpuff is taken very seriously here at Penn since it is one of the only schools that

The seniors and juniors line up face to face with forty-five seconds left in the championship game. The score was 9-6, so the juniors were still fighting for the win. Like always, the seniors up held the tradition of winning each game against the underclassmen.

Captains for the junior team, Kelsey Whitaker, Morgan Malone, Cassy Kaczynski, and Emily Treat, wait for the seniors to call heads or tails as the referees toss the coin. These captains played a big role in the match up versus the seniors.

Jessie Buchanan, the quarterback for the seniors, takes a water break in between her two games. Buchanan led the seniors to the championship title this season. Her friends joke to say, "We were all very proud of her performance, but not as proud as she was of

The junior team and their coaches huddle up after stretching before their big game against the sophomores. The juniors defeated the sophomores and put up a good fight against the seniors. They fell short this year, but can almost guarantee a victory for next year.

Every year a group of senior guys attempt to raise money for those in need at that time of the year. This year the guys raised over $3,000 for the survivors of Hurricane Katrina. Dustin Zachary, Tony Wiltse, Ryan Zerfas, Nick Lore, Ben Jones, Ryan Dorgan, Casey Cleaver, and Travis Uselton were all contributors to raising the money. Jones collected the most money and was crowned Powderpuff King at this year's game.

Senior Shea Fluegge sits patiently as boyfriend, Kyle Brey tapes her cleats before the game. Fluegge and Brey have been dating since seventh grade and are always willing to help each other out in a time of need. The couple were also nominated by their peers to be a part of the homecoming court this year.

Freshmen Olivia Maciejczyk, Holly Richardson, and Rachel Byrd were more than ready for their first year of Powderpuff. "I had a lot of fun this year and I am definitely doing it again next year," explains Richardson. Powderpuff is a great way for freshman to meet new friends and participate in an extra curricular activity.

Dance, just a little bit closer

Juniors Lauren Skoczylas, Kara Fick, and Kristin Buhr show some attitude on Snowball night. This group of girls and their dates traded the traditional high class restaurant for a home cooked meal put on by one of their parents. "Dining in was awesome because it was like we had a restaurant to ourselves, and of course the boys loved it since they didn't have to pay for our meals," explains Skoczylas.

Anna Winterhalter and Nick Barnes, both sophomores, gaze into each other's eyes as the night quickly comes to an end. It is traditional for couples like Winterhalter and Barnes, who have been dating for almost a year, to dance to the last slow dance and end the evening close together. Snowball is one of the most exciting nights for students as they get to dress up and show off their sense of style amongst their peers.

Nick Dixon and Meagen Friedli, both juniors, dance to one of the many trains going around the cafeteria at Penn. Usually every year the DJ at the winter dance will play the train. This brings the entire crowd together to dance and move around.

Junior Jon Pecina carries his date Meagen Joseph, sophomore, as they dance throughout the night. Both Pecina and Joseph said they "had a great time at the dance and plan to attend the dance together next year." Snowball is a fun time for couples to bond with other friends and enjoy a night of dancing.

Scott Sorenson, senior, whispers into his date's ear, Courtney Cors, also a senior, telling her what a night it has been.

Sorenson and Cors tried to make the most of their last high school winter formal, and they agree that the night was better than they would have ever expected.

Freshmen Brett Gordy and Nicole Thorton smile as they enjoy the last dance together

Freshmen Brett Gordy and Nicole Thorton smile as they enjoy the last dance together on their first Snowball experience. Snowball is a very exciting night for freshmen since it is their only night to take part in a formal affair. This couple looks forward to the rest of their high school dances and hope that they all measure up to this year's Snowball.

Senior Matt Patillo and his junior date, Ally Beaudway, dance together at this year's winter formal. Patillo and Beaudway have been dating for a while, and Patillo plans on returning next year to escort Beaudway to her final high school Snowball. Snowball is one of the few events students get to spend the entire night with someone special, making it an experience they will never forget.

Juniors Adam Weaver, Nick Friehoffer, Jason Wright, Chad Pierce, and Peter Vavul show some skin, mocking their dates before heading off to the 2006 Snowball. These juniors are known for their unique sense of humor, so a revealing pose like this is expected.

Sarah McNerney, Ally Holland, and Christina Dean, all juniors, show off their smiles as they patiently wait for the night to begin. Being such good friends, the girls are excited that they get to experience such a memorable high school moment together.

I don't want to miss a thing

Travis Madlem and Becca Essig, both seniors, were themselves out by dancing the entire night. They found the punch bowl quite pleasurable as they would take breaks inbetween songs to hydrate themselves for some more fun.

Seniors Omair Ali and Kylene Buczynski dance together after being crowned this year's prom king and queen. The seniors voted differently this year for their king and queen by taking time to fill out applications and making references to who should be nominated for the prom court. Many students were unaware of who won because it was announced at the end of the night.

Nathan Woodlee, senior, and his junior date Sarah Sokol entered through the main walkway ready to take pictures and dance the night away. By the end of the night students are sweaty and tired so everyone usually gets pictures taken before they begin dancing. Like Woodlee and Sokol, it is a tradition for dates to coordinate their wardrobes.

Juniors girls Tara McFalls and Amy Voth dance with seniors Jake Yoder and Scott Sorenson. Couple Voth and Sorenson said they had a good time for their first prom together and hope he can come back for her senior prom. McFalls says, "I had a great experience for my first prom even though the music was impossible to dance to."

Seniors Ryan Hale and Brittany Verhamme enjoyed their night together at their last prom. Although they are just friends, they both agreed that it was an experience they will never forget. Verhamme explains, "I'm glad I got to go with a friend and not a boyfriend so that I could dance with everyone and not just my date."

Junior Dan Galat and his date take the dance floor alone as they show off their moves. They were one of the first to arrive so that they could take advantage of dancing without a crowd. Galat's date wore a exotic, red dress with spaghetti straps which stood out among the other dresses.

Seniors Meagan Hemler and Justin Youngs get down on the dance floor as the music played. Hemler and Youngs seemed to find a way to make the most of the music put on by the D.J. Most of the students were disappointed about the selection of tunes chosen because it was outdated and hard to dance to.

Senior Brenden Roberts along with juniors Shane Miller, Chris Rice, and Andy Corporon take time away from their dates to have fun with just the guys. Rice, in his fuzzy, pink hat that he bought to match his pink vest, grabbed attention from everyone at prom; however, this was not a surprise to anyone considering Rice's unique personality.

Laughing through The Foreigner

The Foreigner was a comedy that made everyone laugh and giggle no matter what age they were. For three nights every seat was filled and at the end there was always a standing ovation. "I never thought that we would receive such a response as that, but I have to admit that experience and feeling felt good," laughed David Coleman, junior.

Sergeant Froggy LeSuer, played by sophomore Brenton Abram-Copenhaver, talked to Betty Meeks, played by senior Laura Fagerman, about the very shy and timid foreigner he has brought with them. "Being a part of this play has been a great experience!" commented Abram-Copenhaver. "Rehearsals are so much fun and it's awesome playing a very eccentric and excited British sergeant."

David Coleman, junior, played a very frustrated character named Charlie Baker and in this scene he is talking to Sergeant Froggy about how he doesn't want to be bothered by anyone. "Being in this play is a lot different than any other play I have ever been in because it's a comedy. It's an awesome feeling to hear the audience laughing at your jokes," said Coleman.

Senior Alyssa Bollinger played Catherine Simms and in this scene she announced to her fiance Rev. David Marshall Lee that she is pregnant. "It was so much fun playing a very moody pregnant woman, but it was hard to change my emotions throughout every scene. One minute I was happy then next I was furious. It was very funny," she said.

Rev. David Marshall Lee, played by sophomore Pat Naples, sat close to Owen Musser, senior Anthony Heinemann, and discussed the arrival of the new foreign guest. "This play was a great experience for me. This was supposed to be a senior casted play but most of the cast were underclassmen, so we were confronted with some pretty heavy pressure," Naples said. "But I think that on opening night we proved to the audience and to our peers that we should be there."

Laura Fagerman, one of the few seniors cast, played an elderly lady named Betty Meeks. In this scene she gawked at the new invention that Sergeant Froggy demonstrated for her. Fagerman's most memorable moment of the play was during opening night when the explosion was supposed to happen, but it didn't go off. "The whole cast just sort of stood there trying to figure out how to cover it up! That's the best part of live theatre, you never know what to expect!" she said.

Anthony Heinemann, senior, who played Owen Musser, an evil hillbilly, terrorized poor Charlie Baker. "I have never played a villain in a play, which was very difficult but so much fun. The best part was scaring people with my track gun that I used as a prop," he said.

Shane Miller, sophomore, clapped for joy when he found out there was a new guest. Miller played Ellard in The Foreigner, in which he saw very similar characteristics between himself and the personality of Ellard. "The hardest part of becoming Ellard was talking in a southern accent, but after I started practicing it more and more I became accustomed to it," said Miller.

Brenton Abram-Copenhaver, sophomore, performed so well during all three nights of the performances, that when he was asked if he was going to continue his acting he replied, "Yes, I hope to continue theatre, because it is fun. I just hope that I can do it successfully and that everyone will enjoy what I love to do."

One man, one sword, one nose: Cyrano!

A standoff occurs between Cyrano and Valvert, junior Andy Corporon and sophomore Lucas Miner. After being insulted by Valvert, Cyrano goes about insulting himself with more poetic approaches. Cast member Miner commented, "This scene really showed Cyrano's panache." The play Cyrano actually introduced the word "panache" into the English language in the 1800s.

Ragueneau, senior Marcus Wekenman, supports a wounded de Guiche, junior Chris Rice. The movie Roxanne, starring Steve Martin, is based on the play Cyrano.

Senior Liz Kurtz, junior Kara Weaver, and sophomore Jessica Adams cause some mischief as Ragueneau's apprentices. This scene served as an extra comedic touch during the play.

Christian and Roxane, seniors Kevin Borrell and Kelli Koloszar, share an intimate moment during the play's kissing scene. Borrell added "For me, the most memorable moment was when I fell and kicked a hole in the window of the set."

The cadets Shane Miller, Ben Fuja, Brenton Abram-Copenhaver, Sarah Obren, and Laura Stuart get ready to fight! During the second act of the play, the cadets engaged in a furious battle against Spain. Miller, Fuja, Abram-Copenhaver, and Stuart are sophomores, while Obren is a junior.

After entering Ragueneau's bakery, a musketeer, sophomore Charley Pickering, is quickly caught by the attention of Lise, senior Sarah Myers. In Cyrano, Lise was known to be very promiscuous, cheating on her husband Ragueneau constantly. Myers commented, "If I were married to a drunken baker, I would leave him for another man, too!"

Le Bret, Ragueneau, and Roxane, seniors Anthony Heinemann, Marcus Wekenman, and Kelli Koloszar, weep over the death of their dear friend Cyrano. Cyrano took his love for Roxane to the grave.

An orange girl, junior Alix Wiggs, offers Cyrano, junior Andy Corporon, some food, as an inebriated Ragueneau, senior Marcus Wekenman, stumbles about the stage. Cast member David Coleman recalls, "The scene where Marcus Wekenman comes on stage a little inebriated was my favorite scene. He can portray it so well."

The cadets relay a warning to the new cadet Christian, senior Kevin Borrell, not to make mention of Cyrano's nose while in his presence. Although Cyrano can have a short temper with the matter, he showed leniency with Christian, due to the request of his cousin, Roxane.

It only takes a moment...

This is the opening scene in which the people of Yonkers, New York are boarding the train to travel to New York City. This scene was important not only because it was the first, but it set the upbeat mood for the rest of the show. The colorful costumes, talented actors and actresses, and catchy tunes really made this year's spring musical a huge success.

Marcus Wekenmann's and Kelli Koloszar's characters, Horace Vandergelder and Irene Molloy, argue with one another in one of the many funny scenes of Hello, Dolly! Wekenmann expresses the hardships of being involved with the spring musical, "It is very challenging finding the time to juggle the production, homework, family, and sleep, while trying to save your voice for the show." Koloszar explains what she likes best about the musical, "The people! It's so fun to spend time with the cast, laugh, and be crazy!"

Senior Jeff Wojcicki, playing the comedic role of Barnaby Tucker, dances around the stage in his vintage plaid suit. Wojcicki added, "The musical's production week is my favorite and most exciting week of each year because it consists of six remarkable days all mashed together in the same week! There is only one way to describe it; 'Holy Cabooses!'"

Senior Courtney Helman performs her first leading role in the musical while perfectly portraying her character, the widow Mrs. Dolly Levi. Helman describes this particular scene in the play, "This was one of the most emotional parts in the whole show. My character decided to start living her life fully again. This is where the 'fun Dolly' came out, and it was the most fun to play her from there on!"

Seniors Anthony Heinemann, as Ambrose Kemper, and Emily Strzelecki, as Ermengarde, dance together in the dance competition at the elegant and expensive Harmonia Gardens Restaurant. Strzelecki commented on her dramatic role, "This year was really exciting for me because I got to portray a character who was totally different from myself. Ermengarde was the 'whiner' of the show, so I had a lot of fun playing that up."

Senior Courtney Helman made an extravagant entrance as she was lowered from the ceiling. This unique idea surprised and impressed the audience. Helman expressed her thoughts on the entrance by stating, "Hello, Dolly! was such a fun show to get creative with. Dolly flying in from the sky reeked of a great director's touch!"

Seniors Tiffany Green and Liz Kurtz smile as they perform one of the many upbeat tunes. Green commented on her first musical by stating that, "I like seeing the progression the most. Knowing where we started and how we are improving to bring it all together makes it worthwhile."

Sophomore Lucas Miner, who plays the judge, along with the sheriffs, acted out the scene in which the whole cast was arrested. This was Miner's fourth play here at Penn and reflects on this year's production, "It's so much more different than performing in any of the other plays. You experience dance, choir, and drama all at the same time."

Senior Dale Rader gives an outstanding performance as fun-loving Cornelius Hackl. Rader reflects on his high school musical career by stating, "The musical has been an amazing and wonderful part of my high school career. I will never forget the people I have met and the things I have done in this production."

Seniors Valerie Bolyard, Sarah Miller, and Gwen Hess, dressed as ballerinas, ride on the float in the Fourteenth Street Parade in New York City. Bolyard spoke about her memories of the musical, "The past three years in the musical will be memories I will always cherish. Getting on the float in a leotard and tutu was a little scary, but we had a lot of fun with it."

Knockin' em down

Elizabeth High, junior, gets ready to drop the ball down the lane. This was High's first year in bowling club, but she is a dedicated member to the bowling club which is run by Rich Sypel. Sypel has been in charge of the bowling club for many years now and loves seeing his students enjoy themselves while immersing themselves in a time-old sport.

Karen Brabec, senior, watches as her ball flies out of her hand, hopefully to hit all ten of the pins at the end of the lane. This was Brabec's first year on the club. Unfortunately, she was not aware that there was a bowling club and had she known she would have been a proud member earlier. "It's a place where I can just hang out with friends and have a cool time," Brabec stated.

Joshua Strycker, junior, hits perfect bowling form as he launches the ball down the lane at OC Lanes. As his last name implies, Strycker hopes to get many strikes on the bowling club. Strycker has been a member of the club for three years and said "It's a great way to learn and have fun."

Ernest Koenig, senior, swings back in preparation to get a strike! Koenig has been a member of the bowling club for three years now. "It's not for competition, just fun, but my skills and my scores have improved a great deal from being involved in it," Koenig said.

The bowling team groups into a circle to discuss strategy and to joke off a few last minute nerves before the big match. While the bowling club has been around for several years, this is only the second year of the bowling team's existence and it is an amazing feat that they took home the gold from State. The team works very hard to sharpen their skills and they spend a lot of time practicing.

Lindsay Schmidt, senior, shows her enthusiasm over winning state by flashing "We're number one!" Schmidt has been an ecstatic member of the bowling team for two years, since it originated. Schmidt is actually the founder of the team and stated, "I love the competition and the great relationships that you form with people. There are also a lot of awesome scholarship opportunities, and those are always good."

Members of the bowling team huddle in a group to discuss their match. The bowling team is a sponsored school sport at Penn and came home with a first place state trophy this year.

The bowling team poses for a picture after they victoriously won the State Bowling Competition. They have been striving for this and this year they came out on top. Penn has not only a bowling team, but also a bowling club that meets every Thursday at OC Lanes.

Heather Baker and Kristen Sinka, both juniors, show off their first place trophy after winning State. Both girls are proud of their accomplishments on the bowling team and are happy that their hard work showed in a big way, winning them the State title.

From one generation to another

Senior Mike Levy contemplates his next move in an intense game of checkers against his "little brother," a Walt Disney Elementary student. Penn students participate in this program to enrich the lives of our elementary students. Levy uses the time they have together to help his little brother with the struggles he is facing in his life. It is obvious that this Walt Disney student looks up to Levy, so he is doing his best to set a good example.

Senior Hannah Bergeman and her little sister, a Bittersweet Elementary student, take a timeout from their game of Life to smile for the camera. Bergeman loves the time she gets to spend with her little sister, and uses it to inform her of things that she would have liked to know as she was growing up. Bergeman recalls difficult situations she faced to prepare her little sister for the years ahead of her.

Senior Natalie Ingleright poses with her little sister, a Bittersweet Elementary student, right before heading of to lunch. Ingleright and her little sister have become very close throughout their time together, and intend to stay in touch after the program is over. Ingleright is definitely putting in the extra effort to really make a difference in her little sister's life.

Junior Sara Dalke and her little sister take a break from their walk around the Bittersweet Elementary playground to talk. Dalke and her lil sis enjoy the quiet time they get to spend just talking about everything going on in their lives. While Penn students are expected to give advice to their little siblings, Dalke believes she is learning just as much.

Junior Ally Holland heads over to Walt Disney Elementary once a week not only to be a friend but also a tutor for her little sister. Holland hopes to make her little sister's day a little less stressful by helping her master her math assignment. Building confidence is just another way Penn students are enriching the lives of the future generation. Lavon Oke, the orchestra director at Penn, coordinates the Big Brother Big Sister program.

Senior Katie Kuehl strikes a goofy pose with her little sister, a Walt Disney Elementary student, to show how much fun they are having together. While some Penn students rely on the serious conversations to gain the trust of their little sibs. Kuehl takes on the challenge from a different perspective. The time they get to spend together is a break from both of their days, it's a time to simply have fun and relax.

Senior Kevin Hab takes on a group of Bittersweet Elementary students in an exciting game of UNO right before heading out to recess. The Bittersweet boys look up to varsity football player Hab, and hope to follow in his footsteps. Hab uses their time together to inform the boys that they must make good decisions in order to reach their goals.

Junior Brian Brockway and Bittersweet Elementary student take a break from their morning fun to pose for the camera. Brockway and his little brother have become so close throughout their time together that no one can even tell they aren't actually brothers. Brockway loves being a role model, but believes that his little brother is actually bringing out the best in him.

Junior Nick Freihofer puts his skills to the test in a game of Jenga versus a couple of Walt Disney elementary students. The boys of Walt Disney find confidence in their friendships with the Penn guys, and can rely on them to always be there for them. Bittersweet and Walt Disney are not the only elementary schools that benefit from the attention of Penn students, Elm Road Elementary also takes part in the program.

All signs lead to Student Council

Senior and secretary of Student Council Laura Moore-Shay paints a "5" on a piece of paper to help prepare for the Battle of the Bands' auditions. "Senior year on Student Council has been great, especially because I don't have to impress anyone this year," said Moore-Shay.

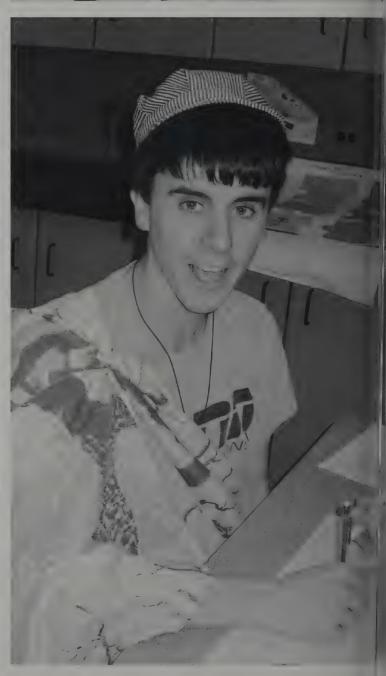

After a hiatus of two years, Student Council decided to sponsor a football pep rally. Senior Student Council member Katie Kuehl cleans up balloons in the gym after the successful-and loud--session. "Student Council was fun this year because we got a chance to do a lot of stuff we hadn't been able to do...like the pep rally," said Kuehl. Because of the success of the fall rally, another one was held for the basketball team.

Junior Student Council president Adam Marsh advertises the upcoming Battle of the Bands competition on the front of his shirt. Being a Student Council member means that sometimes you have to sacrifice your wardrobe to support an upcoming event, but most members say that it isn't that bad. The funds raised from the Battle went to the winning bands as well as to local charities.

Senior Student Council member Ryan Zerfas sports his toga and crown for the second "Toga Day" of the year. "I joined Student Council so I could connect with more people at Penn other than my direct friends," said Zerfas, who also traveled to Louisiana to help Hurricane Katrina survivors.

Sophomore Student Council member Elissa Gennicks finishes up painting a sign for the Battle of the Bands. "It's a lot of fun to get the students involved in our activities," says Gennicks about being in Student Council.

"Student Council does a lot of work behind the scenes to help get students involved, but no one really knows about us," said junior class treasurer Lizzie Clark. Student Council sponsored Jar Wars in May to contribute to the PHM Foundation's "Silver Mile," which was an attempt to pave the track with quarters.

Senior Student Council representatives Lauren McClure, Naina Singh, and Gesi Aho-Rulli stop for a picture while dressed up as the "Channel 5 News Team." As a member of Student Council, it is required to dress up for spirit week, but knowing these three, they would have dressed up anyway.

Allie Vanhyfte, sophomore Student Council member, finishes up packing away toys to be shipped away as donations. "Toys for Tots" was a toy drive run by Student Council to help give toys out to children for the holidays.

A "Pound the Panthers" sign hangs in the main stairway advertising the homecoming football game. Making signs for upcoming events is a major part of being in Student Council.

There's More than Food in the Cafeteria

Senior Kacey Carroll states, "Having tutoring in homeroom is a great idea. It's a great way to help and sometimes you even understand better." Carroll shows flash cards to help seniors Kate Munsey and Travis Madlem in memorizing vocabulary for a quiz. FLHS gives students the opportunity to help other peers. Students who enjoy the language and excel in class take time during homeroom to tutor other foreign language students who many be struggling or need help preparing for finals. Being in the cafeteria allows for many students to be tutored at once and not be disturbed.

Foreign Language Honor Society is made up of students who volunteer their time to help tutor others. The members really enjoy speaking, learning another language, and acquire good grades. Junior McKenzie Miller is a prime example of an excelling student using her abilities to help freshman Austin Solliday. FLHS members make excellent tutors and motivators.

Senior Kyle Schultz has taken control by becoming active in different activities. He volunteered to be in charge of the homeroom Christmas party and created a committee to help with food and decorations. Schultz enjoys having homeroom in the cafeteria so he can eat and do homework with all of his friends. Schultz states, "Being in the cafeteria allowed us to have parties and more space to do things. I'm a huge fan of the food." Being in the cafeteria gives the homeroom space to tutor students and separate into different committees such as Stuff-A-Bus, toy drive, and Adopt-A-Kid to discuss new ideas.

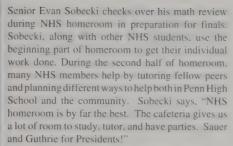

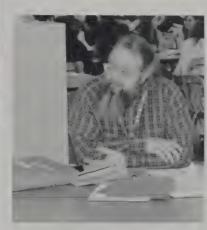

Senior Chelsea Slaggert smiles as she studies with friends during homeroom. Not only does NHS participate in volunteer work, but it also allows for friendships to be created throughout different activities. Different NHS activities include Stuff-a-Bus, working concession stands, tutoring, forming different committees, and working on homework together during homeroom.

Tom Guthrie, NHS homeroom adviser, watches as the student officers conduct a meeting. Guthrie, although in charge of the society, allows the student officers to create ideas that are creative and helpful. He holds meetings once a month and strongly stresses that all students be active in various activities through volunteer work, such as working concession stands at Penn sporting events, baby-sitting for free, or raking leaves.

Senior Jillian Haney is disgusted and stressed as she studies for finals. Haney, along with other students, take advantage of the time allowed for doing homework and appreciate it to the fullest. NHS members are conscientious, studious, and are always willing to lend a helping hand to students in need.

Senior Garrett Brinker checks up on members and makes sure they are putting in hours for community service. He has great ideas and sets a good example for the upcoming officers. Brinker states, "NHS homeroom has really been a great way to bring the organization together to help others, while having fun at the same time. Respect.' Brinker, along with President Yousef AbuGharbieh, has guaranteed that fun and work is being done during homeroom. They ensure that the community is being benefited, and the organization is doing their job representing Penn High School by overseeing the volunteer work done by NHS members. All NHS members must complete 40 hours of service during the Seniors Mike Voll and Jenny Hellyer study together during homeroom. They are both tutors for German; however, they continue to work together to better their abilities at the language. Hellyer states, "It helps me to help them." FLHS gives satisfaction to members because they see the aftermath of their help and time by witnessing improvement in the students that they tutor.

Lending A Helping Hand

Senior Interact officers Omair Ali and Jessie Buchanan address the members of the club in the auxiliary gym. Interact has a member meeting once or twice a month to discuss the new volunteering activities and give the members time to sign up. Tim Gavin and Becky Lutkus are the Interact Advisors.

Senior Alex Forray, an Arborwood volunteer, comments, "I've always liked being involved in volunteering. Being an officer gives me the opportunity to make sure others get the same opportunities to get involved."

Senior Andrew Kim brings the cans his homeroom donated for the annual Food Drive to the conference room. This year's winning homerooms were rewarded with a movie and snacks the day before Holiday Break.

Junior Alex North shows his enthusiasm toward making lunches. North along with many other students took time out of their homeroom to help prepare the lunches for The Center for the Homeless.

Kacey Carroll, senior, says "My favorite part of Interact is the outdoor activities. I meet a lot of new people and can actually see what I am accomplishing."

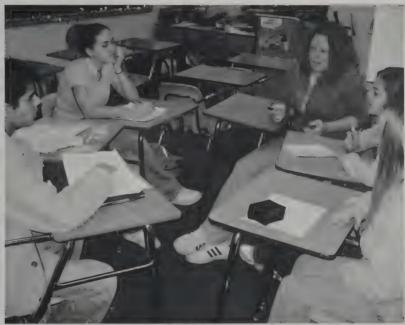

Freshman Andrea Nelson puts condiments on a ham sandwich for the Life Treatment Center. Nelson's involved in various Interact activities. "I'm glad I got involved with Interact as a freshmen because now I know this is something I want to do for the next three years," she said.

Interact Officers Omair Ali, Jackie Kondratko, Jessie Buchanan, Alex Forray, Kasey Carroll, Alyssa Malott, Christine Cummings, and Rachel LeClere meet in the morning to discuss an upcoming meeting. They brainstorm new volunteer ideas and talk about previous events.

Seniors Alli Milliner, Nicky Kranc, and Kara Lee visit the residents at Arborwood Assisted Living Center. Twice a month a few members from the club play games and enjoy time with the elderly living at Arborwood.

Senior Interact member Shannon Summers makes a sign to help prepare for the annual food drive. This year's food drive was a success for not only Interact, but also NHS and Student Council.

"Good morning, Penn High School.".

Here at PNN, our goal is to get you your news, on time, every gold day.

MikeWalker, sophomore

Senior Hilary Smith plays the role of lead anchor in a PNN broadcast. The lead anchor gives important announcements, and also acts as a transition between different reports. Smith's winning personality made her a perfect fit as a lead anchor on the PNN crew.

Senior Lindsey Marian manually edits video with a handheld camera. Although well equipped, the PNN crew is very large, and sometimes students are forced to make due with what's available. Marian does this very well, and is able to get the video ready in time for the broadcast.

Junior Casey Richards holds the microphone as he relays information of national significance to Penn High School. Behind Richards is a green screen, which the PNN crew uses to display graphics and other information. While Richards only sees the green screen, the viewers see a variety of different things, all of which better inform them of what's going on around the globe.

Seniors Aaron Horvath and Kalie Amber make use of the editing equipment which is available to the PNN crew. A lot of money and effort is put into making sure that the students have the available resources to use this expensive equipment. With it, the students can shape raw footage into flawless interviews and on-the-scene reports, all for the benefit of the Penn students and staff.

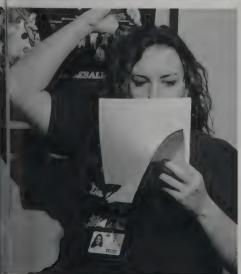

nior Lindsey Marian asks director Jerry Schultz about a hnical difficulty. Constant communication and quick sking allow for the crew to fix issues, so the audience never sees a beat. Such behind the scene work to enhance the duction happens before, during, and after the show, and st of the time the audience is completely unaware.

Seniors David Schroeder and Hilary Smith talk with teacher Kevin McNulty about a problem in the rundown. Even last minute, the PNN team needs to make alterations, as problems and necessary revisions can pop up at a moment's notice. Flexibility and quick thinking are essential skills for a PNN crew member, and Schroeder and Smith certainly demonstrate those skills on a daily basis.

Senior Emily Martin runs the camera during a PNN broadcast. Working closely with director Jerry Schultz, and other seniors, Martin makes sure that the camera is on the right anchor and is in focus. Communication between crew members is key, as a slip up could mean disaster, the people could miss important news. Also, senior leadership is very important. Other seniors such as Nicole Botich and Julia Potter all are in constant communication to make sure the broadcast goes on without a hitch.

Sophomore Matt Lanning writes what video creations he has in the works on the board. With a huge staff, almost thirty students, all working independently, organization and communication is essential for an effective news east. The board, among other things, is critical to keeping this organization.

Sophomore Mike Walker runs the main controls during PNN's broadcast. A second year crew member, Walker's technological knowledge and broadcasting skills are unmatched. Whenever something goes wrong, he is on the scene keeping the broadcast's fluidity intact.

Senior Kelly McDonnough reviews the script before going on air. As the sports reporter, there is no desk for her to hide behind when giving sports fans their latest information, so McDonnough needs to have the script understood beforehand. Her preparation pays off, as she does an amazing job communicating sports news to the student body.

EXTRA, EXTRA, READ ALL ABOUT IT

Seniors Tyler Brown, Wes Laidig, Mike Levy, Ben Nehls, and Ryan Gizewski make up the Pennant's feature "Jock Talk." The seniors talk about current sport stories and later publish their conversations in the Pennant's print issue and on the webpage.

Editors in chief senior Jasmine Humphrey and junior Ashley Henderson oversee the 64 Pennant staff members. The class met during first block each day.

Juniors Josh Kelver and Andrew Corporon edit submissions for the Dried Ink contest for Penn's literary magazine Spectrum. Besides being hard-working and dedicated, Kelver and Corporon are known to bring a lot of joy and laughter to the students around them.

Junior Lindsey Uland reads the most recent issue of the Pennant looking over not only her work but the work of her peers. Uland says, "It's fun [being in newspaper] and we don't have homework every night!"

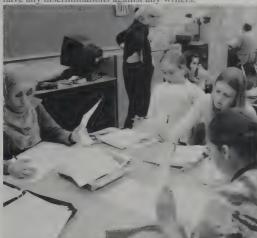

Senior Jennifer Wagner and junior Jennifer Hipsh work together to compete a memoir for Spectrum. Students their own pace to create the yearly publication. Wag said "I really like how laid back Spectrum class is."

phomore Maiko Heflick browses past Pennant editions to to come up with article ideas for the next edition of the nnant. Heflick is one of the Pennant's 64 staff members.

Seniors Abbie Pond, Hannah Bergeman, Eman Abdel-Latief and junior Colleen Klockow reviewed submissions for Spectrum. Student submissions range from poems to short essays. In the submission process, the editors copy submissions and hand them out anonymously, so no one will have any discriminations against any writers

Seniors Brendan Wood, Jenna Baker, and Stacie Doi contemplate early Spectrum decisions. Wood said, "Spectrum is good because it allows writers to be published. It really encourages and inspires them." Wood and Baker are both Editors in Chief while Doi is Art Editor. In previous years, Spectrum had to meet with Creative Writing 1, sometimes in the darkroom. This year they had their own separate class. The National Council of Teachers of English awarded Spectrum the highest rating.

Ashe Pennant's graphic editor and one of its web editors, so omore Caitlyn Osmer has a lot on her plate. Osmer says abl) the Pennant, "I like how it gives many different views an pinions. It is a fun class to be in."

Pennant seniors Drew Corzett, Jake Rinehart, and Thomas Herron discuss future article ideas. These Pennant reporters have covered topics ranging from high gas prices to whether a Playstation 3 is worth the investment.

Seniors Jake Patterson, Erin Buttrey, and Tom Coyne work on future articles and features for the Pennant. All in their first year of the Pennant, both Coyne and Patterson are staff reporters while Buttrey is one of the Pennant"s nine web editors.

... and on this farm there's FFA

Senior Joanna Utley takes a whack at the pinata during the FFA's Halloween party as Anna Lenig, junior, tries to trick her into swinging into thin air. This was Utley's first year being involved in FFA and it left a great impression on her senior year.

Shawn Gearhart, the state FFA secretary, and Anna Lenig, junior, smile big for the camera at the FIRE Camp banquet. Lenig really puts a lot of effort and hard work in the organization. She says, "I love meeting new people and being recognized for our achievements."

Juniors Sarah Horn and Stacey Shafer festively dressed for the occasion. The future farmers enjoyed themselves while participating in the "Trick-or-Treating" for the Food Bank.

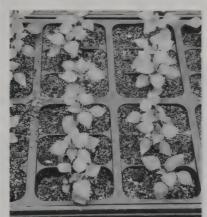

Many of the studies in FFA are independent so the members usually work on their projects alone. The Halloween party gave the members a chance to get together and socialize as one big group.

Junior Sarah Horn shows off her candy bar she retrieved from the pinata at the Halloween party. The FFA were only able to meet a few times during the school year so the times they shared together were extra special.

These plants are the fruits of the students' labor. The plants are grown in Penn's greenhouses and are sold each year to landscaping companies.

Joanna Utley, senior, shows off an authentic East-Asian outfit while trick-or-treating for the Food Bank. The members of FFA volunteer their time not only to agriculture, but to help a greater cause.

Juniors Kaci Moore, Danielle Grose and Anna Lenig, and sophomore Quinn Beldon worked as a team at the LDW Camp. The Leadership Development Workshop is a camp for students with an interest in agriculture.

These baby ducks were raised by FFA members for a summer SAE project. SAE, or Supervised Agriculture Experience, is a two-credit summer school class. During the summer the students can raise their animals without having to step inside a classroom. Though the teachers didn't see their students, they were still able to monitor the students' progress.

Spelling Out the D-I-C-T-I-O-N-A-R-Y

The senior spellers abided by their long standing tradition and all piled into the Happy Trolley in Logansport. "This year was really difficult, and we had to study a lot, but yet again we have seen it through to success," said Adam McGinn, senior.

The team shows off their ribbons after capturing their eighth consecutive regional championship. Coach Pete DeKever believes the Penn spellers to be so successful because of their exemplary character and extraordinary work ethic. In addition, each member of the team is able to handle the pressure through preparation and much competitive experience.

Virginia Johnson, senior, has no reason to hide her wide grin! Penn High School has succeeded in bringing home the most consecutive and total championships of any sports or academic team at Penn.

Captains Jasmyn Russell, Brendan Roberts, and Ashika David, all seniors, mimic Charlie's Angels at the Spell Bowl State Finals. The captains had the most pressure out of anybody to preform perfectly and lead their team to victory, and this year they did exactly that. The captains spelled all 207/207 words correctly this year!

Varsity spellers proudly display their welldeserved state championship banner. This year, the team won all six of the invitationals in which they competed, and spelled flawlessly at the state finals. All of their hard work paid off when the team was awarded their seventh consecutive state championship.

Ashika David, senior, beamed for the camera after breaking the state record with her all-time career score. The number 90 is significant because in spell bowl, 90 represents a perfect score. "Participating in spell bowl has really helped me expand my horizons by meeting lots of different people," explained David.

This team will study anywhere! Just minutes before the state finals, the team looks over their words one last time. By this time in the season each person on the team has already been to 50 practices, eight competitions, and has spelled over 30,000 words.

Sarah Han, Jasmyn Russell, and Naoko Sugama, all seniors, couldn't be happier after winning the state championship. "Spell Bowl has been awesome. It has really given us something to work towards, and it was great to see all of our hard work pay off in the end," said Russell.

Sophomore spellers Linda Huang, Laura McGinn, Kurt Vanlandingham and Abby Walton take a break in the Happy Trolley in Logansport.

Train Your Brain

The Future Problem Solvers team had a real life problem to solve this year involving their participation in the State competition. They had to contact the people from Regionals first so that they could even compete in the State competition. "We have to solve problems for other problem solvers," jokes Adam Lamm, junior.

The Social Studies Academic Super Bowl team discussed The Tyranny of Change, a book they were reading to assist their studies on the Progressive Era, the subject for the competition. Fueled by dedication, determination, and some sweets, the team earned their seventh state championship this year, the second in a row.

In Fine Arts Academic Super Bowl competitions, teams of two or three at a time have to work together, without talking, to solve the questions before the other teams. This year, the focus of the questions will be on the Progressive Era.

Michele Weldy, sophomore, really enjoyed getting involved in the Social Studies Academic Super Bowl because it gave her a chance to goof off and get creative, even though she wasn't athletic. "We put a lot of work into what we do and we get to know each other really well in the process."

The English Academic Super Bowl takes a moment out of their morning practice/breakfast to pose with their coach, Jim Sauer. During practices, the team reads novels, short stories, and poems and discussed the themes and time periods of the literature. Sauer is not only coach, but father of two members of the team, Emily and Anny/ie.

Seniors Sarah Han, Yeona Chun, Angela Shan, and sophomore Sean Lee pose after a Fine Arts Academic Super Bowl meet. As seniors, these members will be able to carry on their fine arts knowledge to new heights as they move on to bigger and better things. As a returning junior, Lee will have big shoes to fill.

Junior Sarah Horn, along with sophomore Sarah Vennell, showcase the chalkboard after a Future Problem Solvers practice. Freedom of Speech, one of the topics of discussion, prepared the team for their competitions. The team began by recognizing problems and then proposing realistic solutions to solve them.

Senior Sarah Han, juniors Lexi Ryan, Sarah Sokol, and Cali Reedstrom smile as they prepare to demonstrate their fine arts knowledge. Many people know about academic competition, but not many know about the fine arts team. These unsung heroes are integral to the success of the Academic Super Bowl team as a whole.

Sophomore Michele Weldy, freshman Shirin Baradaran, and junior Deborah Wei take a moment to laugh during a team discussion. "This year we made it a point to work harder so that we could go to state," says junior Deborah Wei.

Academia Nut

Sophomore Sean Lee, senior Yeona Chun, and junior Mengwen Zhang work together as a team during a practice round at the Science Academic Super Bowl to convince each other of the answer to a problem. The team members had to collaborate to solve a multiplicity of difficult questions.

Helen Han, sophomore, liked the way things were run in the Math Academic Super Bowl because the team members gave presentations to each other instead of just sitting in on a lecture, like in a classroom setting. "We get to make up our own problems and if one person gets stuck on it, the rest of the team helps them out," Han said.

Knowledge Masters consisted of multiple fast-paced rounds of two hundred questions each where the quicker the team answered the questions, the more points they received. Gautham Vaidyanathan and David Bretz, both juniors, concentrate hard as they speed through a round of questions during a practice set.

Dmitri Gekhtman, freshman, contemplates the steps he will take to solve a difficult math problem during a Math Academic Super Bowl practice. "I'm here to demonstrate my progress in the pursuit of knowledge," he said, when questioned about his dedication to the team.

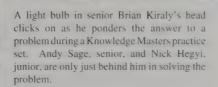

Michael Xue, junior, takes notes on a difficult problem presented to him at a Math Academic Super Bowl Practice. The team was very efficient and worked very well together to come up with problems that would challenge their abilities and make them stronger competitors at their competitions.

Junior Peggy Chang consults fellow teammate sophomore Matt DeVito about a problem she is unsure about, hoping he will have the answer. Together, their team was the first to crack the problem.

Seniors Austen Hesch. Sandeep Chennikara, and Adam McGinn prepare themselves for the upcoming meet against Washington. As the only seniors on the team, these three teammates took it upon themselves to be good role models for the rest of the freshmen and sophomores on the team who will take over next year.

Sophomore Sean Lee, and freshmen Miraj Shah, Daniel Howard, and Alex Mirowski prepare for a meet. Being on the JV team. Howard says, "Next year, I'm looking forward to participating in more meets and setting less timers."

Speaking Their Mind

The Penn Speech seniors celebrate after a superb result at Sectionals. The team was largely dominated by a motivated senior class. The speech team will certainly miss them next year.

Seniors Lee Merril and Yousef AbuGharbieh prepare for their upcoming discussion round at the Valparaiso Sectional Speech tournament. AbuGharbieh and Merril both qualified for Nationals in Austin, Texas, for debate, as well as excelling in speech.

Junior David Coleman practices his poetry program before entering a round. Speech students practice every aspect of their performance, and adding just that one extra hand gesture can make a huge difference.

Sophomore Lucas Miner reacts with disbelief after an amazing fourth place finish in State Finals at Warren Central in Indianapolis. Miner and his partner, sophomore Brenton Abram-Copenhaver, performed a hilarious duo routine, which showed off their great acting skills.

Sophomores Seher Chowhan and Beth Ames rehearse a duo before competing at Sectionals. While they have a script with them, it is still very difficult to get the timing and chemistry right in a duo event. Chowhan and Ames have great teamwork.

Senior Andy Sage plays Dance Dance Revolution on his computer before his event, radio. Sage was state champion in Radio after four years of hard work. Sage attends DDR tournaments across the country, helping start a crazy trend at Penn.

Senior Naina Singh cries while holding a fourth place trophy at sectionals. The team placed fourth, tying its highest-ever placing in recent history and sending fourteen entries on to the state competition, a school record.

Seniors Kourtney Bauswell, Stephanie Orosz, and Eman Abdul-Latif goof around in between rounds at the state competition. While the tournament is intense, the team still finds time to relax and enjoy each other's company. The many Saturdays they get up early together to spend twelve hours or more with each other allows great camaraderie to

Sophomore Pat Naples receives a ribbon after placing at Sectionals, earning him one of his two spots in the State tournament. Naples' year was highlighted by tremendous success at a tournament at Bradley College, in Illinois, and qualifying for Nationals in the congress

Tinkering their way to 7th in the nation

Senior Matt McKissick slices the wood with a circular saw as fellow senior Aamod Samuel looks on through his safety goggles. While most of the robot is aluminum, wood is still an important component. Samuel won an "Above and Beyond" award at the Robotics Open House in May.

Seniors Ryan McGann, Stephanie Houin, and David Ebersol analyze and assess the machinery, fine tuning their product to perfection. Houin, the only girl in robotics this year, plans to major in engineering in college. The Black Knight weighed in at 119.9 pounds, just shy of the 120 pound maximum (and this after being stuck at 126 even after drilling holes in it). McGann won an "Above and Beyond" award at the May open house.

Senior Adam McIntire finishes up a long night as he works on the computer. McIntire plans to major in Mechanical Engineering in college, and thought that joining robotics would be a great way to get hands on experience with technology. For six weeks, the team frequently worked until after midnight, sometimes staying until 3:00 a.m.

Senior Cory Shulaw works with a mill in the construction lab. Some students know how to use the tools before the class, but for many, it is on the job training. Penn's robot is student built, whereas some schools use professional engineers.

Bill Davison, a mentor from the community, lends some of his time and knowledge to help out the robotics team. Many mentors from area businesses came into robotics and spent hours of their own time to help the team. In addition to the manpower, companies donated thousands of dollars to help defray the $70,000 cost. GM gave $10,000 and AM General $3000: Patrick Metals and Bosch also contributed. Team members gave numerous presentations to solicit donations.

By 5:00 p.m. on February 28, the Black Knight was ready to be shipped...but the Fed-Ex truck was late. The finished product is impressive, a contraption which lobs balls a great distance through a small hole at a rapid rate. Sounds cool? You should see it in action. Students competed at Purdue University in West Lafayette; in Cleveland; and at the finals in the Georgia Dome in Atlanta. Parents waved swords in the stands to support the team.

Seniors David Ebersol and Jeff Evans have a little fun after returning from nationals. After putting in so much effort on their robot during the majority of the year, the students are able to relax once they come back from nationals, where they compted against 344 teams.

Senior Lee Brinley fixes up the robot after coming back from Nationals. The team had great success in competitions and placed seventh in the national competition out of hundreds of different teams.

High School Handymei

"Why do I like Building Trades you might ask? It's simple; I like building...and I like trades. And when the two come together, somehow a bunch of lazy guys build a house," said Eric Bertsch, senior. Beyond the building and the trades, the guys cooperatively learn and work together. Bertsch, senior, Nate Freeman, junior, put the finishing touches on the master bedroom closet.

Zack Mechling, junior, sawed a piece of siding down. Mechling got involved in building trades with several of his friends because they are interested in becoming general contractors in the future.

Building a house doesn't mean simply whacking a nail, making sawdust fly, and trips to the ER; it also entails paying close attention to detail and painting everything in sight. Gary Ryan, senior, painted several doors while rock'n away to a few country tupes

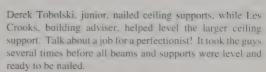

Chris Cummins, junior, cracked up as he sealed the door frame of the bathroom. Cummins said, "The best part of building trades is the freedom and all the life skills I learned."

Sean Tucker, senior, decided to take building trades 1 the wanted to learn all the trades skills. Tucker said, "Se day when I have my own house....I'll be handy."

Building Trades boys tried hard to stay focused but they ldn't resist grabbing a moment in the spotlight. With seven a smiling and only two guys working it's a miracle that the segoes up in only nine months.

The building trades class completed the 36th house, but it's the first year that the house was purchased by the building instructor, Les Crooks. The final selling price of the house was $186.000, all of which goes back into the budget for next year. A frequent phrase the guys used was, "It's not our house," but their hard work helped to build a success.

As the weather grew cold, it was a race to finish the outside of the house. Nick Stith, junior, reinforced the edge of the roof while goofing around with a few of the guys under him. Watch out for falling serews!

Rome wasn't built in a day, and the Building Trades house wasn't built without a clean-up crew. Tom Petko, junior, didn't only swing a harmer, but also completed one of the end of the day grunt tasks as he swept up the living room.

on ubanks, senior, and Kayne Cline, junior, worked the while putting the doors on kitchen cabinets. Even to he the guys at times were rude and obnoxious to each the they became a family.

Devin Fumarolo, junior, is the only student returning to building trades next year. His prior experience will be a huge advantage. Fumarolo nailed up sheeting on the outside of the house and overcame his fear of heights.

Dessert and a show

Sarah Miller, senior, performs her solo in front of a large crowd of friends and family. Miller had a solo in addition to playing the trumpet. She really enjoys being a part of the Jazz band and especially has fun at the performances.

For veterans like senior Alex Sejdinaj, the Jazz a la Mode concert doesn't lose any excitement over the years. Having played guitar for five years, and being in jazz band three of those five years, Sejdinaj likes the way the concert is coordinated with so many kids playing at once. "I like the experience jazz gives," said Sejdinaj, "it's a very different playing environment."

Senior Bryan Keve has been in jazz band all four years of high school. "My favorite part of this year was the trip to Goshen College when we got to play in their new performing arts center." Keve liked being able to have fun playing the music he likes to listen to.

Freshman Helen Roszkowski is new in the jazz environment but soon realized the amount of work needed to make the concert work, "We started preparing for it in October," said Roszkowski, "it was fun learning something new, I've never done Jazz before." Roszkowski hopes to continue taking Jazz band throughout high school.

The audience moves down the dessert table before the start of the performance. The Junior Adam Gadson has no problem getting friends and family of the Jazz band members are treated to a variety of ice creams and cheesecakes. This was a sweet touch to the jazz band but his tenth year drumming. "I into his music, whether it be in jazz band or on the drumline. This was Gadson's first year in wanted to learn a different style of drumming. so I decided to take this class. It's a lot different than anything I've done before." he said.

Not all jazz members start their freshman year; some even wait to join until senior year. Sophomore Paul Azzi comments, "Something that I got out of this year was the confidence to go out in front of a crowd and play a solo. I learned how to improvise notes within a scale and overall I'd have to say that it was the biggest thing I learned." This is Azzi's first year in jazz band and his fifth year playing the trombone. He really likes the relaxed approach during the after school practices, "Everyone came in, kicked back, and just enjoyed playing some jazz."

Jazz band teaches its members a lot of valuable skills, such as expression, confidence, and reading notes. Junior Whitney Cullen, a member of Intermediate Jazz, said, "Class is great because we have the ability to express ourselves and its a time when we get to hang out with our friends and play music."

"Playing jazz isn't playing notes on a page, it comes from the soul," said senior Ben Jones. "that's what we have to think about every time we play." Jones plays all kinds of music, even Disney songs. The more experience you get with jazz, the more you start to understand what you're playing, and it becomes easier for guys like Jones to put their emotions into the

Sensational Strings and Such

Hannah Che, junior, practices her solo from Vivaldi's Four Seasons during a concert dress rehearsal in December. The fall concert featured an all girl orchestra while playing The Four Seasons because back in the Baroque days, Vivialdi taught at an all girls' school.

Tom Keranen, senior, and T.J. Howard, junior, break the traditional orchestra sound. Keranen rocked the electric guitar while Howard beat on the drums during a more modern rendition of Pachebel's Canon in D.

John Green, sophomore, gets ready to play at Bittersweet Elementary School. The orchestra spent a few days touring the PHM elementary and middle schools. The younger students enjoyed when the orchestra played the popular theme from Harry Potter.

Robbie Rumpf, sophomore, is one of the six string bass players at Penn. The string bass is a very unique instrument, and is often used to play jazz music.

Christine Wu, freshman, and Annsa Huang, sophomore, enjoy being stand partners. The two girls were both members of the pit for this year's musical production, Hello Dolly!

Zachary Tuttle, freshman, concentrated on sight-reading his music. Although the bigger instruments often play the harmony to a song, that does not mean the music is easy.

Carolynn Chang, freshman, and Madelyn Glassford, freshman, played a Sanctus duet together during the fall concert. The fall concert was titled "Music Through the Centuries" and each era of music was accounted for. Sanctus was a composer of the medieval period, which covered years 1000 to 1400.

Ruvi Chauhan, sophomore, does not limit herself to one instrument. In addition to the violin, she also plays the piano and the harpsichord.

Advanced orchestra students had to attend a Monday night rehearsal on Halloween. However, Evelynn Lape, senior, Ben Manderfeld, junior, Matild Dosa, senior, and Abby Huffman, senior, could not pass up celebrating the fun holiday!

Letting their song soal

Sophomores Lucus Miner and Brent Abram-Copenhaver perform together in the winter choir concert. Miner enthusiastically stated, "Since I was young I've always wanted to be in the choir. In elementary school I remember seeing the Chamber Choir and thinking to myself, I want to do that!"

The girls of Chamber Choir sound the trumpets as the guys crouch behind them during the song "We Need a Little Christmas." The Chamber Choir is composed of juniors and seniors. The choir spends many hours of rehearsal in order to do so many amazing dances.

Sophomore Ben Lawecki pretends to be a reindeer during the song "Little St. Nick." During the song he went around stage with reindeer antlers on his head. Lawecki said, "Choir has been a great experience. I've made a lot of good friends and great memories."

Troy Kauffman gets into the joy of directing during the choral concert. Mr. Kauffman is one of three directors he Penn Choir. The others include father/son duo C. 1 lar Holaway and Brent Holaway.

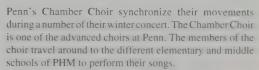

the Rader, senior, drapes his arm over sophomore Josh ipp's shoulders during an excited moment in their singing, th Rader and Hupp were chosen along with a few other boys perform a group solo during the winter choral concert. "I to the traditions, and how from year to year they are there, if even when I leave they will still be intact," Rader stated.

The Penn Singing Kingsmen sing the National Anthem during the homecoming game at the beginning of the year. It has been a tradition that the men's choir sing before the start of the game.

Symphonic choir.

Senior Victor Kamwendo kneels down to emphasize the song, "Shopping Mall Seizure" during the annual winter choral concert. "It was something different for the choir program and it was a blast rapping it out," Kamwendo said. Kamwendo is a member of the Penn Chamber Choir and the Penn Shomore Catherine Gregory practices her sight reading at the reginning of choir class. Gregory is a member of Girls' Clir, the intermediate class. Every class the students practice the sight reading skills. "I love music and its interesting at cts," Gregory stated.

Senior Jenna Baker waits for her cue to sing during dress rehearsal for the winter choir concert. Baker has been a member of the choir since freshman year and is now a proud member of the advanced choir. Baker said, "It's sad that it's all over. Choir was such an amazing experience for me."

Don't Argue With Me

Dan Marshall, junior, reviewed notes before delivering his argument. Marshall became involved with Mock Trial because the criminal aspect of law fascinated him and he would like to be a lawyer someday.

Lyndsey Warner and Kurt Drury, seniors, avoided the tension at crunch time with a round of playful punches. Moments like this kept the Mock Trial team laughing all the way to state.

During the trial a team is not allowed to be identified by school name, so each team was given a nickname. Rich Sypel affectionately named this group The Hufflepuff team.

See your tax dollars at work! Jesse Ullmer, David Ames, seniors, Gautham Vaidyanathan, junior, Lyndsey Warner, Julia Potter, and Kurt Drury, seniors, relaxed under one of four glass sculptures at the Hammond Federal Court House that cost $250,000 tax payer.

We came, we cheered, they conquered

The cheerleaders had a very busy season with cheering almost fifty games, including both the girls' and boys' basketball teams. Cheering for both teams cut into practice time because there were times when they would cheer two to three games a week, but the girls did the best they could by fitting in quick twenty minute practices before each game. A lot of new girls were added this season that contributed to the squad's success. Starting out the season with all new stunt groups was a challenge, but the girls persevered and worked hard to get to the level that they wanted to achieve. The girls were creative and came up with all new stunts. This was a great season, not only because the boys' basketball team had a great season, but because the girls became so close and had a great time doing what they love. The cheerleaders helped out and supported the basketball team by decorating towels, their locker room, bedrooms, and making them cookies to wish them good luck. The girls also tried something new this year by hosting a hospitality room, which consisted of crackers, cookies, fruits, and vegetables for the other team's cheerleaders during halftime. This gave the girls a chance to relax while talking with one another. This was a great season that will always be remembered.

MAGICAL Memories WORDS

from the court...

"Cheering basketball season was definitely the highlight of my year. The girls really clicked and we spent a lot of time before and after games together." Ashley Szklarek, junior

"I am so glad I decided to cheer for basketball season. It was the perfect way to end my senior year, not only because the team did so well, but also because all of the fun times we had as a squad. "Ali Cerney, senior

Sophomore Lauren Walker was very hard working and always willing to step in whenever she was needed. She is a prime example of a leader and does what's best to benefit her squad.

The varsity cheerleaders perform their new stunt, Arabesque, between first and second quarter of the game. The girls do their best to involve the crowd by getting them to yell "Go Penn Go!" Not only does this increase all the excitement, but it gives encouragement to the players.

The cheerleaders proudly display the Sectional Championship trophy. The girls worked hard to cheer on the team each game.

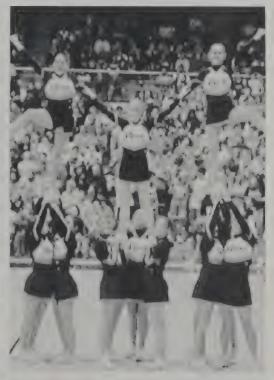

Sophomores Katie Lamb, Tifanie McDaniel, Malory Pecina, and Erin Noonan smile just after hitting a new difficult stunt during the exciting Mishawaka vs. Penn JV game. The girls were new additions to the JV squad and were key contributors to the squad's success throughout the season.

Sophomore Lauren Harroll, juniors Rachel LeClere, Bridgette Hill, Micaela Wills, and senior Kylene Buczynski fly in the impressive Wolf Wall stunt. This is one of the many stunts that the varsity and JV squads combine in order to create bigger and better stunts.

Juniors Bridgette Hill. Rachel LeClere, and Micaela Wills hit their stunt. Roundabout, with precision during one of the many time outs. The cheerleaders must be alert and prepared to run out on the floor at any time. This requires the girls to have the ability to efficiently communicate with one another and think quickly on their feet.

The varsity cheerleaders wait patiently on the sidelines while crucial free throws are being made towards the end of the final quarter. The cheerleaders grew very superstitious throughout the season when the varsity players would shoot free throws. Each player had their own specific cheer to ensure scoring points.

Some of the varsity cheerleaders group together for a quick picture before a game. The girls had a hard working season, but enjoyed the time they spent together, whether it be at a game, team dinner, or team sleep over. The girls were always positive and could find a way to have fun in anything they did.

Scholarship money record broken by Class of 200

Seniors Jenny Hummer, Justin Hill, Ashika David, Courtney Helman, and Lindsay Schmidt rightfully receive the Principal's Citizenship and Service Award. Hummer, also the winner of the Tom Heck Scholarship, states, "Senior Recognition Night was a really nice culmination of the last four years of high school. It was meaningful to me to see all of the honors our peers earned." Hill follows her up by stating, "I've never been more proud of our class. I've always said that I would never want to be in any other class and that was proven with the accomplishments everyone made and the amount of money our class received. Great job, everyone!"

Senior Dana Fortney tightly hugs yearbook adviser Mary Nicolini after winning the 2006 Yearbook Award along with co-editor Jennifer Lawler. Nicolini brags proudly about Fortney's accomplishments throughout her three years of being on staff. "In the time she has been on staff, she's worked with 352 pages a year, $70,000 a year, with computers freezing every other second and her first days of summer being spent in room 154." Nicolini, Fortney and Lawler had a strong bond throughout their years together and both coeditors-in-chief did an excellent job fulfilling Nicolini's expectations for being yearbook editor.

Senior Ashika David enthusiastically accepts the generous LSA Scholarship for the University of Michigan. David will be using this scholarship to fund her desire to study political science at U of M next fall. Along with scholarship she earned the honor of becoming one of the valedictorians for the class of 2006.

Senior Yousef AbuGharbieh proudly shakes the hand of interim assistant principal Mike Sacchini. AbuGharbieh received the Robertson Scholarship from Duke along with many other awards. He will attend Duke on a full ride scholarship next fall to study political science. AbuGharbieh's awards were part of the $4,604,542 earned in scholarships by the class of 2006.

Senior Katic Rice smiles as she unexpectedly receives the Paul H. Schmucker Award, which is voted on by the faculty. Rice expresses her thoughts by saying, "I'm so honored to be recognized in such a distinguished and amazing group of seniors. The Paul H. Schmucker Award is hopefully a foothold to greater things in the future." Rice was very involved in student council and other various activities.

Senior Naina Singh smiles as she receives the Boosters' Scholarship at Senior Recognition Night. After receiving the award, Singh stated, "I'm really grateful to get the Boosters' Scholarship. They really give a lot to our school and it's awesome they picked me!" Singh will be attending Purdue next fall.

Senior Jeff Wojcicki hugs German teacher Chris Vandygriff as he receives the 2006 German Award. He has taken four years of the language, visited Germany during the summer after his junior year, and has excelled in this subject along with many others. Wojcicki will attend Purdue next fall and looks forward to taking his next step in furthering his education.

Senior Lindsay Schmidt has been successful her four years at Penn. On Recognition Night, she accepted several scholarships including Schmucker Scholarship, Penn PTO Scholarship, and Granger Business Association Scholarship. She was also awarded Most Outstanding Graphic Artist. Schmidt will continue her artistic talents next fall at Purdue University where she will major in computer graphics.

Senior Evan Sobecki proudly received Wabash College scholarships from Wabash alum and Penn parent Andy Auter. Sobecki, when thinking back on Recognition Night states, "It's an honor to receive these grants and I will use them to further my education and play football." Sobecki will take what he learned from his four years of playing Penn football and he hopes to be a key contributor to the success of the Little Giant football team in Crawfordsville.

Kingsmen Madness

Matt Patillo, senior, pauses to set up his jump shot while seniors Kyle Brey and Derek Neubauer come for back up help. The seniors enjoy playing I-ball and many of them look forward to the season.

Mitch McKamey, sophomore, puts up a one-handed shot trying to avoid his shot being blocked. His shot went in to help the Michigan State team out with another Trevor Strefling, sophomore, gets rid of the basketball to a teammate. Gautham Vaidyanathan, junior, plays defense on Strefling. The two faced off in one of the final tournament rounds. Vaidyanathan's team did advance to the final round.

Coley Moore, sophomore, goes up for a lay up to help put his team ahead. Moore was a significant factor to the winning team, Michigan State. He is looking forward to another successful season next year.

A group of friends and dedicated fans enthusiastically watch the two teams going head to head during the championship game. Many of the onlookers played I-ball themselves but were not lucky enough to advance to the final round.

Gautham Vaidyanathan, junior, dribbles the ball down the court and tries to avoid a defender. Vaidyanathan was a member of the Texas Longhorns, another successful I-ball team. The Longhorns ended their season as runners up.

Sophomore Coley Moore sprints up the court trying to get open for a pass despite being heavily defended by senior Andrew Kim. Kim has played I-ball all four years and is going to miss it next year.

Jeff Wojcicki, senior, shoots a short jump shot while being defended by sophomore Quinn Doan and senior Corey Klujsza. The boys played a tough game in the final round of the tournament. Both teams battled for the trophy but unfortunately the Longhorns did not come out on top.

The Michigan State team poses after winning the 2006 I-ball championship. Team members include Ryan Kaczmarski, Coley Moore, Ben Piotrowski, Mitch McKamey, Tommy Lizzi, Quinn Doan, and Corey Klujsza. Overall, the team had a great year and fortunately, all but one player will be returning next year.

Help is on the Way

Kelly Masters, sophomore, wraps her ankle in an Ace bandage. Masters sprained her ankle severely during a volleyball practice. Masters said, "The trainers helped me a lot this season with my injury and helped me get ready to play."

Shaun Bridges, freshman, gets his finger taped by athletic trainer Nancy Thomas. Thomas has been working as a trainer for ten years now at Penn. She immensely enjoys being around the students and feeling like she's making a difference.

Ryan Howard, senior, dunks his foot into one of the whirlpools. Howard sprained his ankle during a football practice and he uses the athletic trainer program to his advantage by coming in regularly. Howard stated, "The coaches announced about the athletic trainers to us at the beginning of the year. The coaches are the ones who recommended me to see them."

Jose Carrillo, freshman, ices his knee while waiting for one of the trainers to examine his injury. Carrillo tore his ACL during a previous football game. Carrillo said, "When I tore my knee it felt like normal, but the next day it was numb and I couldn't walk on it at all." Carrillo is an inside linebacker and had to sit out a total of four games.

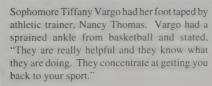

Freshman Garrick Dikos had his wrist bandaged by Nancy Thomas. "They are pretty nice and help with getting the job done," stated Dikos.

Kyle Hilfman, junior, checks out his ankle before having it looked at by a trainer. Hilfman sprained his ankle during a junior varsity football game on a Monday night. Hilfman stated, "It stinks being in this position, but the trainers help."

Ben Piotrowski, sophomore, sprained his wrist which prevented him from playing football in the position of running back. Although Piotrowski had to sit out two games, he still smiled and stated "Trainers here bring me comfort, and they help prevent me from future injuries."

Mac McKay, freshman, laughs at a joke that Jaime Scollon, one of the athletic trainers, told while checking his leg. McKay states. "They treat us like angels." McKay played offensive center and guard on the freshman football team. Due to his injury he was out for over a month

Freshman Steven Sandefer started off his Penn wrestling career with a year he won't forget. Competing in the I3O weight class, Sandefer was one of a few freshmen who got the opportunity to go to State. Sandefer commented on State, "It was like a dream come true. Every year I've gone down to watch and this year I had the honor of being a part of it."

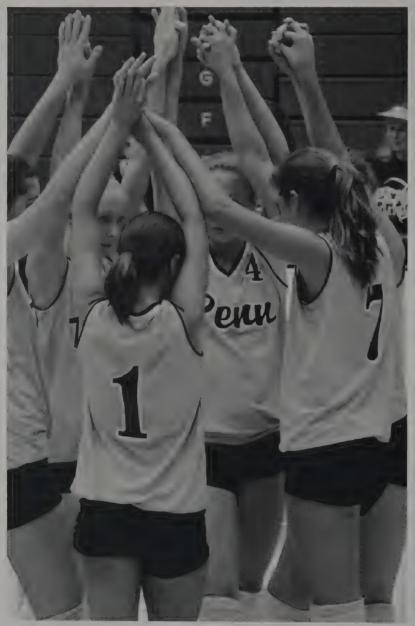

Sophomore Jenny Behrens positions herself in the blocks before the start of the IOOn dash.

Th∈ varsity volleyball team huddles up after an ace during their second match. An ace is when a player serves the ball and scores a point without th∈ opposing touching team the ball once.

Junior Lauren Skoczylas shows her school spirit in a football helmet after th∈ Mishawaka game. Spirit such as Skoczylas' is common around Fi∈ld Freed during the fall.

The varsity boys' soccer team hustles back to position after a goal was scored by Penn. The clock stops after each goal, so it gives the boys time to take a quick breather before starting the intense game again.

The boys' varsity basketball team and varsity cheerleaders demonstrate enthusiasm for winning the title of NIC Champs for the fourth year in a row.

Senior swim team member Zac Coquillard hurries to the finish in the 200 meter butterfly. Coquillard qualified for state three out of four years, earning state runner up awards twice.

Running Around

Penn's boys' cross country is running around, through, and over the competition. The boys are very disciplined when they run for the same goal; to get to state. Their mind is set at the beginning of the year. They say to themselves help us get there or get out of our way. They train and train for their meets in which they run their hearts out and give one hundred ten percent. The team went 6-1 in 2005, but only went to sectionals. David Schroeder went all the way to regionals in individual cross country. Coach Marshall Sellers set up individual workouts. These workouts had different mileage each runner had to do each week. Some people had up to 60 miles to run each week. Even though the boys' cross country didn't go to state they did really well to set the ground work for next year's cross country squad. The squad is really looking forward to next year, because they have many good juniors and sophomores that are returning to run for Penn, but only time will tell if Penn will be on top next year.

JOCK TALK

"Without that many injuries we would have gone farther then a lot of people thought, but we could not stop fate." Michael Husband, sophomore

"The boys' cross country had a disappointing season, but we're looking forward to next year, because we have good returning runners." Jimmy Nagle, junior

Senior David Schroeder runs cross country because Prefontaine said, "To give anything less than your best is to sacrifice that gift." Schroeder doesn't want to sacrifice that gift.

Senior Evan DeBeck, a four-year veteran, helped the team demolish the Cavemen in this early season showdown

The pack is close at the beginning of the race, but spreads out after the mile point. Good advice to runners is not to get stuck in the middle--get to the edge. In the words of Coach Sellers. "Avoid the flows."

Sophomore Michael Husband is running past the competition at Culver. The sophomore class has the talent necessary to make a run at State senior year.

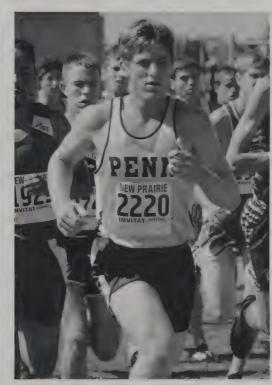

Senior Thomas Coyne tries to get ahead of all the other racers. He runs cross country to get in shape for hockey. Coyne is always happy when he finishes in the top ten.

Sophomore William Crane runs around the course in top form, because nothing less will be good for Coach Sellers.

Sophomore Lance Wu finishes up one of his meets in good stride. Wu's discipline and perseverance served him well. Each person has to pull their own weight on the team.

Senior Evan DeBeck finishes the meet and takes his time while cooling down. Coach Sellers wants the players to run after the race to cool down.

Running to a new BEAT

The methodical beating of feet upon the pavement had a different rhythm this season for the girls' cross country team. New strategies, fresh encouragement, and daily challenges all resulted from the new coach Marshall Sellers. Coach Sellers has pushed his team hard and in many directions, and the girls all have developed a deep-rooted respect for their coach. After losing strong seniors to graduation, the girls knew they faced a difficult task of rebuilding this season. With great coaching, major dedication, and strong solid team. The work paid off as the team took toward becoming their best. second at regionals; however, they were defeated at semi-state. Despite the loss at semi-state, the girls have much to be proud of. Penn was represented at the NIC meet by Christine Cummings, junior, who ranked in the first team, Sarah Hutchings, sophomore, who ranked in the second team. Amanda Buck, senior, and Whitney Cullen, junior, both received honorable mentions. Sophomore Alex Jarvis said, "We all had to push through pain, but we were unstoppable. You couldn't make us not want to run." This outlook will greatly contribute to the team's success in unity the girls rose to the challenge, and built a the future as they continually push themselves

That's right...we like to run!

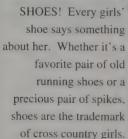

Our team was ranked pretty badly this year. But with a lot of runners stepping it up, we were able to beat teams we weren't suppose to, and still have a pretty good season."

Lisa Larkin, junior

"Working hard all year long keeps you in great shape and ahead of your competition." Whitney Cullen, junior

"As soon as the gun goes off, all the nerves release from your body and then you just chase the person ahead of you until you reach the finish line." Kali Nelson, senior

With half of the 4k race completed, senior Amanda Buck strived to finish strong. At the end of the race her beaming smile revealed her pleasure in beating her current personal record by finishing the race in 16 minutes and 44 seconds.

After a swift warm up the team huddled together before embarking on another two and a half mile race. The adrenaline soared in the huddle and prepared the girls to run hard and fast.

The girls of the Penn cross country team started their races out strong this season. Their new techniques helped them capture the win at Sectionals.

With one year under her belt, sophomore Sarah Hutchings takes longer strides as the crowd cheers her on to finish the last leg of the race. The team received a new coach this year, and Hutchings said, "People say that we're getting the best coach from around here, and it's really starting to show."

Andrea Korzan, freshman, and Deborah Wei and Elizabeth McKenzie, juniors, congratulated each other after finishing a hot race. Korzan said, "I love the family that I've gained, and the way the upperclassmen took care of me and made me part of their family."

Christine Cummings, junior, has shown tremendous dedication to running which has helped her push through every race. This season she continued to refine the running skills she has been developing since middle school. Cummings said, "This season we've focused on ourselves as individual runners and that has helped us to improve as a team."

Freshmen Alyssa Priebe and Allison Knutson flashed enthusiastic smiles after finishing a race at the St. Joe County fairgrounds. Both girls are very excited to be a part of the Kingsmen tradition. Priebe said, "In middle school they just tell you to go run a mile, but in high school it's the real thing."

The girls didn't just run hard and sweat a lot together this season, they became great friends. Hard work, dedication, and energy were put into every practice, but after practice the fun continued at pasta dinners and sleepovers.

Power of the Pack

Going into the 2005 season for Penn football, many people felt that the season would be short and not as successful as years in the past. However, through the players' speed, agility, and faith, they proved many people wrong. Early in the season, a pep rally helped get the players and students excited for the upcoming season and emphasized how important school spirit is. After losing many players due to injuries, such as seniors Evan Sobecki and Justin Reeder, juniors Alex Pajakowski, Robert Campbell, and Nick Keim, and sophomore Colev Moore, the team still managed to win both the NIC and advance to regionals, after winning sectionals. The underclassmen really stepped up this season and were a vital part to many large plays that contributed to winning. The season ended in early November with a record of 10-3. The 0-7 loss to Merrillville broke many of the senior players' and fans' hearts, but Penn pride was still present on the field that night as the players held their helmets high in the air for one last time. From the first snap of the ball to the last tackle that was made, the games underneath the Friday night lights will never be forgotten.

GOLDEN WORDS

Quotes from under the lights...

"When you're tired and you don't think you can continue, you look to your buddy next to you and know he won't quit on you." Jason Wright, junior

"The best thing about varsity football is the rush from running out on the field and seeing the Friday night lights." Joe Beehler, senior

"The feeling you get playing football is only experienced through the game; no one experiences the train like we do." Derick Neubauer, senior

"When looking back on my last season, I know I am going to miss the game, but what I am really going to miss are all the friendships." Ryan Gizewski, senior

Senior kicker Jon McSorley kicks a field goal held by senior Joe Zens. McSorley had a lot of pressure put on his shoulders this year during close games.

The Wild Bunch took control of many close games this season. The defensive players were successful by giving the offense more opportunities to score. Seniors Scott Taghon, Derick Neubaurer, and junior Alex Pajakowski take down the opponent and recover a fumble. Both Neubaurer and Taghon were placed on the All-Northern Indiana Conference football team

Senior Ben Nehls, named to the All Northern Indiana Conference, leads the Kingsmen onto the field fired up to get another win. When the team runs by, the crowd gets pumped up and ready to cheer for them. During close and crucial games, the fans' enthusiasm helps keep the team motivated.

This season, the junior class helped contribute to both the offense and defense. Juniors Jason Wright, Danny Williams, and Teddy Salamon attack the opposing team and show aggression with each play. They will be strong leaders as seniors next season.

Senior tight end Kyle Brey tries to escape from an opponent while attempting to get a first down. Not only did Brey contribute to the win against Washington, but he also represented his school as a nominee on the Homecoming court and was later placed on the All-Northern Indiana Conference football team.

Senior Jon McCollester looks to the side lines to receive assistance and encouragement from the coaches. As a senior, McCollester has really benefitted from his years playing Penn football and he stated, "You work hard for the coach and you play. You work hard for yourself and you make plays. You work hard for your team and you win football games." McCollester is an unselfish player, always thinking of his teammates first, which later contributed to his placement on the All-Northern Indiana Conference football team.

Junior quarterback Nick Keim kneels to discuss the upcoming play. Keim's performance during the season's first encounter against Mishawaka was a prime example of his leadership role. Keim continued to lead the team even after his wrist injury, and plans on working hard for next season with high hopes to go to State.

Junior QB Nick Keim looks to throw the ball to senior tight end Matt Patillo. Keim really stepped up this year for the team and led them to another NIC championship, but was not able to contribute to the last game of sectionals and regionals due to breaking his wrist during the Mishawaka sectional game. However, Keim, along with Williams and Wright, was named to the second team of the All-Northern Indiana Conference.

A Season of Many Victories

It was a great season for the JV football team with an undefeated record of 9-0. The freshmen season was almost as good with a record of 8-1, losing only to St. Joseph. Both teams played with a tremendous amount of effort and dedication. All the players worked very hard in the off season as well. They spent a lot of time after school in the weight room and went to summer camp and had two-a-day practices. "If you're not willing to give 100%, there's always someone or some team that will. Our best bet as a team is to work hard and give 110% for our opponent to have no chance," said Steve Sandefer, freshman. The freshmen team went on to become conference champions.

JOCK TALK

"Playing freshman football was fun because I got to become teammates with my opponents from middle school." Sam DeLuca, freshman

"Freshman football will prepare me for when I play for varsity. I also made new friends through this team." Jason Keough, freshman

"Winning isn't everything. It's all that matters."

Matt Zdziebko, freshman

Zach Griggs, freshman

Alan Burger, junior, attempts to block a punt against the Colonials after the Wild Bunch forces the Clay offense to go three and out. Burger enjoyed playing JV because he got to meet some of the underclassmen.

During halftime the freshmen players take a break before going back out and playing again. Most players usually stay loose and drink a lot of water so they are hydrated for the next half.

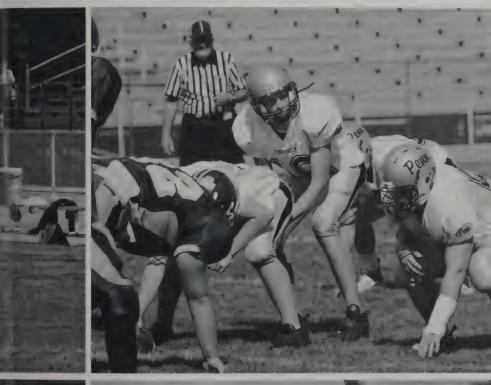

Junior defensive end Chaz Reeves posted up the offensive linemen. After playing Friday nights with varsity, Reeves gets up early Saturday mornings and plays with the JV team.

Junior Alan Burger blocks for sophomore Christian Haithcox on a punt return. Haithcox made a significant contribution to the JV football team. After the block made by Burger, Haithcox ran the ball into the end zone.

Sophomore quarterback John Green gets ready to take a snap from his center. When Green got in the games he made big plays for the JV Gold Rush.

Sophomore running back Steven Depositar breaks free from a Clay defender. "Playing JV football prepared me for upcoming years at the varsity level," said Depositar.

Freshmen Matt Zdziebko rolls out of the pocket looking for a receiver to hit. Zdziebko was the main quarterback when the Kingsmen wanted to pass the ball.

Sophomore Seth Hill and the rest of the Wild Bunch celebrated after every big play made by the defense. Celebration was familiar to the Kingsmen with a record of 8-1.

Leavin' it to the Imagination

Once again, the Marching Kingsmen impress thousands of people who watch them at state finals. Moving up from their placing last year, the band took sixth place, the highest place ever achieved by the Penn marching band. This year's show, Metamorphosis of Life, had music once again composed just for the Marching Kingsmen. The band compares the stages of a butterfly to the stages of human development. With a show about change, it was only fitting for the Kingsmen to move out of their comfort zone and enter new realms. This year the band attended their first Bands of America regional competition. For the first time the band competed against top bands from Illinois, Indiana, Ohio, and Kentucky. Going into this foreign situation, the band, along with the directors, really had no idea what the outcome of this situation would be. "Because we haven't competed against these bands before we don't know how we will do. This makes the day a very nerve-wracking learning experience for both the students and the staff," explains brass staff member Chad Miller. At the end of the night Penn proudly marched away from the competition, not only making the night finals, but also leaving with the fifth place

"I want to be part of the tradition. All of the excitement, pride, loving every minute of it, but most of all, the people." Adam Shulaw, sophomore

"Some people say that band takes away your life, but not when your life is band." Robi Davidson, junior

We were fortunate to have great students and a fine show to perform. I was very proud that this year's group was able to tie our best placing at state finals in recent years."

Director Glen Northern

In the middle of the color guard's transformation, a beautiful baritone solo fills the stadium. "Playing the solo is all about following the emotions of the moment. If you play with heart, everything is worth it," explains senior soloist Jake Robaska.

Something that is usually left up to the guard, the band makes "city life" poses, which help depict the hard working, and high pace actions of moment.

A group of band members play a pep tune during a football game. You can always count on hearing the band on the sidelines during every home game. "We like to think that playing for the team actually helps them," explains senior Devin Hillsdon-Smith.

Senior drum majors Kate Munsey, Elisebeth Etner, and junior Kerry Rutkowski pose around drum major Wes McGuiness as "Wesley's Angels." "This season, the drum majors formed a very close bond. We were able to have fun together, but still get work done," explains Munsey.

Although this year the Penn Band received the highest placing they have ever received, the band was not worried about scores. "We just loved that we got to perform together. The whole band loved each other this year, so it was easy to be an awesome group," explains senior Sarah Miller.

The trumpets and mellophones explode around the field at state finals. During one of the most intense portions of the show, these members gave nothing less than 100%, which left the audience in a total uproar at the end of the movement. "State finals was amazing. The adrenaline rush was unlike any other. especially when we got sixth place," states senior Lauren Meert.

This year the Marching Kingsmen got the chance to feel the anticipation of a full retreat twice, as they stand awaiting for their placement. Being the first Bands of America event Penn has attended, they competed with bands from across the country that they have never competed against before. It was quite an accomplishment to do as well as Penn did at their first B.O.A. event. "When my horn slammed down at the end of my performance tears formed in my eyes," expresses senior Becca Essig.

Band members are "all the same..." while they march during their opening number Birth at the Bands of America regional. Achieving fifth place at the first B.O.A. event Penn has ever attended was quite a feat. "Before, I was extremely nervous, but afterwards I could not have been prouder," expresses freshman Keaton Bloom.

Color Me Crazy

They practiced, they performed, they evolved into butterflies. "Metamorphosis" was the theme for the 2005 season. Every day of practice for the Penn color guard meant transforming from a regular student to a butterfly in all its stages. This proved to be both difficult and fun throughout the season. In performances, the guard had to change into four different costumes to represent the four stages. The well-rehearsed color guard took their butterfly dances with the marching band when they traveled down to state. They helped the successful Penn Marching Band place sixth. "I had my best show of the year at state finals. Performing is the best feeling ever; it is great when all of your hard work pays off--it's very rewarding," exclaims senior Allie Sulok. As for the underclassmen, they anxiously anticipate the years to come in color guard and are excited for the new challenges that lay ahead. Hillary Matheison, freshman, states her love for color guard best, "Guard is my life. I love it."

On Guard

Why do you add a little color to your life?

"Guard has always been my getaway. While you're spinning you forget about everything else. Not to mention it keeps me fit and I have developed great abs and biceps."

Kayla Jaworski, senior

"I know the price of their success: dedication, hard work, and an unremitting devotion to the things they wanted see happen." Shakurah Nuruddin, Guard Staff

"We work through blood, sweat and plenty of tears to make our show as perfect as we can. It also takes a lot teamwork cooperation to make the show successful."

Christan Eby, sophomore

After emerging out of a cocoon, junior Sara Snyder shows skills of tossing her rifle before she "spreads her wings to fly." "When the cocoon dropped and I saw all of the people sitting in front of me I got a rush of energy and was completely focused on catching my quad," states Snyder.

The color guard finishes the performance by representing the final cycle in a butterfly's life: becoming the butterfly itself. Revealing beautiful butterfly wings like the butterfly in its final stage, the color guard were "given their wings" and happily fluttered as if their wings were real.

Throughout the show the color guard represented the four stages of the life cycle of a butterfly: larva, caterpillar, cocoon, and then the butterfly. "The costume changes really helped with the overall effect of the show, but from our standpoint they weren't very fun. It was pretty hectic," explains senior Cassie Hahn.

Demonstrating hard work and smarts in the second stage were the caterpillars. They were called "bookworms." They not only showed the innocence of the caterpillar stage, but also the innocence of adolescence and the changes humans go through.

The color guard takes a moment to shed out of their "butterfly" skin and gather around the Penn Kingsman. Ryan Dorgan, senior, took the position of the Kingsman mascot this year. The girls showed their appreciation and gratitude with bright smiles.

Guard is more than just using those muscles to spin weapons; you have to be a good actor, too. "When trying to be the 'spoiled' personality you have to put yourself in those shoes even if you are not actually like that in real life. When flirting with a band member I had to pretend that they were my all time crush. This helped me get into my character better," explained junior Alycia Parson.

Dancers, in the second song, acted like the crazy and silly kids you knew in school. Making funny faces and mocking the other guard sections, these girls really got to express their goofy sides. "We stand out because we get to wear big, green wigs and just act crazy!" exclaims freshman Alex Munsey.

This year was not a normal year when it came to the guard uniforms. Dressed as "fuzzy orange caterpillars in tiaras," the sabre line tries to portray the "spoiled" high school girl clique. "That is the best part of the show because we get to flirt with the audience members," states sophomore Ericca Christman.

Callin' home

This season the Penn Winter Guard was, once again, nothing less than beautiful, precise, and hard working. Basketball courts which are usually filled with sweaty athletes have been transformed over night, and are now being used to host an angelic group of dancers. Winter Guard is considered to be the sport of the arts, and is nothing less. This year's show, Calling Me Home, depicts beautiful flowing movement to give off the idea of hope, love, and family. At the end of the show the guard does end up "going home." The guard had an amazing season, finishing the IHSGA state level competition in third place. The season for Winter

Guard does not end at the state level. The guard continued their practice, packed up their bags, and traveled to Dayton, Ohio, during spring break to compete nationally in the Winter Guard International circuit. WGI is more than just a chance to perform. According to Guard staff Krystal Breden, "WGI is an amazing learning experience for the girls. The girls became much more versatile and were able to mature dramatically. I am extremely proud of the hard work they did this winter." In the end, the guard had two days worth of spectacular performances which easily allowed them to move past prelims and end up placing ninth in their semifinals bracket.

Catch Phrase

What keeps you going all year long?

"I did Winter Guard to challenge myself physically and mentally, along with the long lasting friendships that come with this activity." Courtney Long, freshman

"This year we were pushed the hardest and we, as a team, accomplished everything we wanted to. It was an amazing season." Alycia Parsons, junior

"I thought that Winter Guard would help me get better for fall guard, and it would also allow me to get close to all the girls that are in guard." Katherine Fliess, freshman

"It was such a great experience to teach girls who strive to be successful both on and off the tarp." Melissa Ganser, guard director

Faith and hope are two symbols that the guard portrayed in their show this year. Sophomore Eryn Edinborough explains, "At this point in the show I am spinning a flag with a breast cancer ribbon in it."

"Hard work" and "dedication" are two words that are highlighted in the Winter Guard's vocabulary. As the group performed, each member showed off their grace and poise. With amazing body work, each member floated around the floor tarp as if they were a cloud.

With an outstanding leap, senior Cassie Hahn started off the show with a bang. Hahn had many solos throughout the show, each one giving her a chance to show off her acquired dance skills.

Juniors Rachel Huntley and Jessica Burnham are caught in midair as they leap across the floor. Showing their athletic skills Burnham explains, "Guard takes a lot of practice and hard work, but it's all worth it in the end."

While many guards had tarp changes in their show. Penn had a unique twist this year. Half of the guard lifted the tarp and held it in air to reveal a scene of the sky. Beauty and grace were two features of this year's show that the audience could not overlook. Sophomore Christan Eby is a prime example of this as she flaunts her ability to float across the newly revealed sky as the guard starts to make their way "home."

This year all of the guard's flags represented a different memorial ribbon. Freshman Kelli Gall is seen passionately spinning her flag during state finals. Gall was proudly one of only five freshmen who earned the right to perform on the varsity guard team.

Strength and beauty are two opposing forces. However, when it comes to Winter Guard, these attributes become one. Senior member Allie Sulok shows her strength as she tosses a quad on her rifle, but catches it with the greatest finesse.

Golfing Girls Break State Record

"I challenged them that we could become the best team in the history of the state. I don't know if you can ever really say that, but what I do know is that we broke the all-time state record by nine shots. I think we've got a pretty good claim as at least one of the best teams ever," said coach Jim Garrett. For the second consecutive year, the girls' golf team played their way to the top. For this year's seniors, it is their third state championship. Through each and every practice this year, the girls earned themselves the right to be called champions. In their final state match Penn finished with a great score of 614, shattering the old state record of 623. Not only was the team in first place, but they were 32 strokes ahead of the team in second place, Noblesville High School.

JOCK TALK

"This was a year of domination. Hard work doesn't guarantee success, but a lack of hard work guarantees failure. The girls were extremely dedicated this year, and their determination paid off. Mental toughness is key." Jim Garrett, head coach

"One of the funniest moments of the year was when Michelle Fleischman picked up a 'nickel' off the green. It actually turned out to be some girl's ball marker!" Julia Potter, senior

Erin Buttrey, senior

'This was definitely our most exciting year. We basically swept everything--sectionals, regionals and state. The team had more than enough qualifiers for state, which was awesome."

Michelle Fleischman, senior, sinks a putt on the practice green near the clubhouse at Juday Creek. Golf is a very meticulous sport, requiring tons of practice and even more patience.

Anne Ormson, freshman, successfully chips her ball out of a sand trap on the first try. With such skills, Anne Ormson individually placed sixth in state. At the state tournament Anne finished with a 72.

Laura Ormson and Julia Potter, both seniors, get ready to tee off at Juday Creek. Juday Creek is the girls' home course, where they practice every day and host matches on most weekends.

Courtney Jelinski, senior, lines up a putt on the sixth green at Juday Creek. Even the smallest shift in the terrain could cause the ball to roll in the wrong direction, so this is a very crucial skill to have when playing golf.

Anne Ormson, freshman, Michelle Fleischman, Courtney Jelinski, Laura Ormson, Erin Buttrey and Julia Potter, all seniors, show off their well-deserved state championship.

Julia Potter was NIC player of the year. Erin Buttrey and Laura Ormson joined her, and Jim Garrett was Coach of the Year. Anne Ormson and Courtney Jelinski made second team.

Michelle Fleischman and Erin Buttrey, both seniors, hold up a license plate with the popular phrase, "Git 'R' Done." After their state victory the girls signed the plate, which was symbolic of their enormous accomplishment.

Sisters Anne Ormson, freshman, and Laura Ormson, senior, share a smile before a tournament. This year Anne made varsity as a freshman, joining her senior sister on the team. "I really enjoyed having my sister on the team, but it will be sad next year when she and the rest of the seniors are gone," said Anne.

Julia Potter, senior, portrays perfect form while teeing off. Potter finished with the low score of 68 at the state tournament, landing her the title of fifth in state for her individual performance. "It was so great to see our team really improve from last year, not only did we break so many records, but we also grew really close as a team," said Potter.

Can't Touch Them

state title is a distant dream, but for the Penn varsity boys' tennis team it was something that was written in their destiny. Each player worked hard daily to achieve an impressive record of 20 -2 and the coveted title for State Runner-Up. "It's something we did have a shot at this year," said Coach Rick Dukeshier. "But you can't be disappointed when all seven guys played their hearts out, which they did." This year the team lost all three of their singles players to graduation. The three seniors are looking at continuing their tennis careers past high school. One senior in paticular,

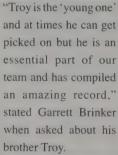

For many teams the goal of competing for the Chris Jordan, won the Mental Attitude award at the state competition, becoming the first boys' Penn player to win the award. "This has been a special year. We realized the effort that was necessary to win a state title but we fell short," commented senior Garrett Brinker. Three members of the team, Chris Jordan, Dean Guyer and TJ Snelson, filled three of the seven slots on the all-conference team. Next season the varsity squad will have four returning players. The returners and the upcoming JV members look forward to another eventful season and hope to carry on the Penn tennis tradition.

Brinker vs. Brinker

"It's nice playing with my brother. Garrett is the one that pumps us up before matches and always gives me encouragement," commented Troy Brinker, sophomore.

"Garrett and Troy are completely different in every way from their personalities to their style of play," stated teammate T.J. Snelson.

Senior singles player Dean Guyer backhands the ball to his opponent during an intense point. Guyer has compiled an impressive 13-1 record during regular season and is planning on playing tennis in college.

Doubles player T.J. Snelson, junior, focuses on the ball as he volleys it back over the net to his opponents. "I played with four different guys this season. I really enjoyed playing with Garrett because I was always confident he would finish his shots." Snelson said.

Before playing each match and after the introduction of teams, the Penn players come together for the routine motivational cheer. The team senior co-captains Chris Jordan and Garrett Brinker are responsible for preparing the team for the match.

Sean Donigan, junior, rallies back with his opponent in the last JV game of the season. Donigan has been very important to the Penn tennis dynasty, and looks forward to his senior year.

Junior Gautham Vaidyanathan teams up with his partner Troy Brinker in continuing their winning doubles streak. "As an upperclassman I feel more responsible for the team and try to motivate others before every match," replied Vaidyanathan when asked how this year has been different.

Senior singles player Chris Jordan quickly sends a shot back over the net giving his opponent little time to react. When commenting on this season Jordan remarked, "The team has really stepped up since the loss of last years' seniors. We've performed really well."

Coach Rick Dukeshier gave pointers and encouragement to his doubles team of juniors Ben Bellville and T.J. Snelson in between sets. Coach Dukeshier always makes an effort to keep his players confident and to continue working hard for every point.

Junior doubles player Ben Bellville stares down his opponent in between points. "This has been such a great year because all of the guys on the team are so supportive of one another," Bellville said.

Together they did

"Together we can!" is what the Lady Kingsmen soccer team chanted after winning the sectional championship over Clay. This year turned out to be an amazing one! Under new coach Mike Luber, the girls made it all the way to the semi-state championship, and that hasn't been done by the Lady Kingsmen soccer team since 1996. "Our goal was to play together more as a team then ever before," stated juniors Kristen Buhr and Corissa Hart. Their strategy worked well. "The soccer team has always had talent," observed Lindsay Johnston, senior, "but this year we put this talent together. Nobody had an 'I'm better than you' attitude. We did it for each other." The sectional title will always be remembered, along with the semi-state game against Valparaiso, which came down to double overtime, with freshman Sarah Blaase's goal assuring the win with only minutes to spare. The Lady Kingsmen finished with an outstanding record of 18-3-2.

"This year we went down and beat North Central and Center Grove, and that hasn't happened in a long time." Emily Johnson, sophomore Sophomore Nichole Fundora holds her hand over her heart during the singing of the National Anthem. Fundora was one of the gifted underclassmen who earned a starting position on the varsity squad.

Junior Megan Haney boots the ball. Haney played outside midfield, and this season her first goal will be remembered by seniors because it ensured their win over the Blazers on Senior Night.

Unity is an important element in every team sport. Before every game the girls lay in a circle and discuss their strategies. These talks motivate the girls to play at 110%.

Senior captains Jackie Kondratko and Liz Traxler attend the coin flip to see which team gets the ball first. These girls served as great leaders for Penn throughout the season. Kondratko was selected as the Most Valuable Player of the NIC, and Traxler was named to the second team.

Jessica Krichbaum, junior, takes control of the offense. Krichbaum is a starting defender, but somehow always finds her way from coast to coast to get a shot off at her opponent's goal. Krichbaum's ability to transition from defense to offense so easily is just one of the many reasons she was named to the first team of the NIC as a junior.

Senior Lindsay Johnston dribbles away from her Mishawaka opponent. Johnston's been a contributing member of the Lady Kingsmen soccer program for four years running. This year her younger sister, Alyssa Johnston, sophomore, joined her on the varsity team.

Starting sophomore Ashley Sill dribbles the ball up field. Sill has been great on offense this year. Ashley, along with her sister. Katie, was one of the two pairs of sisters on the varsity team.

Senior Jackie Kondratko smiles as she leads the varsity team in warm-ups. Kondratko displayed excellent leadership skills in warm-ups, practices, games, and in the classroom throughout this year.

All of the JV and C Team players hope to advance in their skills and eventually become part of the Penn Kingsmen girls' varsity soccer dynasty.

Sophomore Cherise Richards ran for the ball in a game against the Marian Knights. Richards beat out her Marian opponent for control of the ball and looked to score a goal. This was her second year playing soccer for the Penn Lady Kingsmen.

Freshman Katie McMahon launched the ball across the field with a hard and powerful kick. She was successful in keeping the ball away from her defender.

The JV team ran over to the stands after their victory to thank the crowd for their continual support. Every game the crowd got to see not only exciting action, but hard work and dedication from both the Kingsmen and their opponents.

Speed and quick feet allowed freshman Hayley Alden to break away from her defender. Alden was one of the few freshmen on the JV team this year. She looks forward to playing Penn Soccer for three more years.

The C Team huddled in order to mentally prepare themselves for their game. They talked about strategies and got each other pumped up to play. Communication is a key element needed in soccer. Sophomore Erika Costilia fought off her Marian opponent to keep control of the ball. Costilia enjoyed the entire soccer season and hopes to play throughout the rest of her high school years. She made a lot of friends and good memories.

Freshman Kendra Toombs looked to boot the ball across the field to get away from her Mishawaka opponent. Being a freshman on the JV team is quite an accomplishment for any sport, especially soccer where the competition for spots is so high.

Freshman Shelby Sinclair used some fancy footwork in order to split two defenders. After a series of well executed soccer moves she broke free of her Cavemen defenders, and was successful in getting one of her teammates the ball.

The other two were Varney Venal, who returned from Saint Joseph, and Nils Stoermer, a foreign exchange student from Germany.

Junior defender Brice Wozniak rests for a moment as he watches the play ahead of him. Though this was his second year playing varsity soccer, it was his first year being a full time starter.

Soccer team members Kyle Robertson, Mike Messina, Aaron Fisher, Tommy Holobyn, Omair Ali, and Eric Fiedeldey watch the game from the sidelines as Alan Cook and Victor Kamwendo stand on the bench to get a better view. All are seniors except Robertson and Fiedeldey, who are sophomores, and Fisher, who is a freshman.

The boys huddle up at halftime to discuss their strategy for the second half. Coach Steve Dregits always tries to motivate the team during these halftime meetings.

Senior Mike Messina dribbles the ball downfield on a Kingsmen attack. Messina was known for his toughness on the field. He even broke his nose during one of their games and amazingly returned to play in that game. Senior defender Alex Firtl (13) runs upfield during a game against Mishawaka. Firtl was known for his long hair until he buzzed it all off before a game along with the rest of his teammates.

Senior forward Adam Waters runs on to a ball played in front of him. This year was Waters' first year as a member on the varsity squad. He improved tremendously over his four years playing at Penn and was a valuable member to the team this year.

Senior defender Alan Cook runs to kick the ball upfield. The Kingsmen's defense was one of the most dominant in the conference. Along with Brendan Wood and Jeff Wojcicki, Cook was selected as a captain for the Kingsmen by his coach and his fellow players. Their leadership was apparent throughout the year.

Great Expectations For Rising Kingsmen

The junior varsity Kingsmen started the season before school even started, getting up at five in the morning just to come to practice. The practice certainly paid off, as Penn had yet another winning season, finishing 6-4-5, led by coach Dave Wuergler, junior captain Dan Stackowicz, and freshman captain Austin Hiatt. "We got a lot better, and we played well against some really tough opponents," Hiatt commented about the season. It's true; the Kingsmen beat and tied some very tough opponents this season, including rivals Elkhart Central and a competitive St. Joe side. The C-Team got a new coach, Len Jablonski, and although the team lost all of their matches, they still found the season to be productive. "We worked hard every practice, and I think the improvement our team made was quite evident by the end of the season," freshman Adam Wasowski said about the year.

Sophomore Jordan Martz walks onto the field, ready to play. Martz's speed and agility made defenders miss as he sprinted towards the goal. He was the JV's leading scorer this season, scoring 16 goals in all competitions.

Freshman goalie Jacob Hueni punts the ball after a diving save. Hueni went through intense goalie training in practice held by Coach Aaron Azbart, and improved dramatically throughout the season. He has a bright future in the Penn High School

Sophomore Luke Reichert dives and collects the ball during warm-up. The starting goalkeeper for the junior varsity squad, Reichert did well to keep the ball from going into the back of his net. With the three varsity goalkeepers graduating, Reichert hopes to do the same next year for the varsity squad.

Sophomore Steven Sorenson stops an opposing player from moving the ball towards the goal. Sorenson physically dominated attackers in the defensive third of the field. Although the freshman squad suffered some tough losses, Sorenson always maintained a positive attitude.

Freshman Daniel Howard lunges to keep the ball inbounds. Howard's height made him an aerial force on the freshman team this year. Being new to high school sports can be tough, but Howard, as well as the rest of the freshman team, adapted very well to the increased intensity.

The team runs back after yet another Kingsman goal. Scoring was one of the things the JV did best this season, outscoring teams by sometimes as much as eight goals. In this game Penn routed Mishawaka by a score of 9-2.

Freshman Matt Gradeless throws the ball into play. Gradeless' skills throughout the year often left opponents guessing. Gradeless was one of only four freshman that made the junior varsity team this season.

Beyond the net

If there was an award for the most dedicated volleyball team, coach Lisa Pawlik and her girls would take the title, putting in roughly 20 hours of practice a week, not to mention the months of conditioning leading up to the season. The Lady Kingsmen, led by three seniors, had an amazing season filled with hard fought battles. The season ended with a heartbreaking loss to the Mishawaka Cavemen in the Sectional Championship match. For the first time in Indiana history, the sectional draw was exactly the same two years in a row.

Although the rivalry between Penn and Mishawaka did not turn out well for the Kingsmen, they took pride in the other big games where they took away a victory, including Muncie Burris, defending 2A State Champions. This year Coach Pawlik welcomed a lot of young talent to her varsity team. With only three seniors, almost half of the team was underclassmen. But even with a young team, the Lady Kingsmen finished of the season with a record of 26-8, and were NIC runners up.

When one senior steps out, another is happy to step in. Seniors Bethany Hostetler and Tracy Lee have both been key contributors towards the team's success this year. Lee regulates traffic at the net while Hostetler protects the back court. "I don't mind going out, because I know that Bethany is going to do her job," said Lee.

"If I call a time-out, I usually have something to say. I like to send the girls out with the belief that they can win, even if we're not on the winning side." Coach Lisa Pawlik will use any time-out that comes to her, whether she calls for it or not.

Senior Tracy Lee and sophomore Emily Ehlers use their combined strength to penetrate the net which, ever so unfortunately, causes the other team to cry. "I am proud of myself because I've worked hard on my technique," said Ehlers, "and it's cool to see the other team totally rejected."

With the impressive skills and intense dedication of junior Kelsey Labrum and senior Kim Walag, the ball never hits the ground. These two, along with the rest of the team, have developed a sister-like bond. "I didn't know what to expect at first," said Labrum, "but when I met the team, they accepted me right away and we're best friends."

"Ladies, right foot in." It's tradition for the varsity team to gather in the center of the court to offer each other some last minute encouragement before the first whistle blows.

The long awaited senior night was a game to remember. Dressed in feathered boas and tiaras, the three seniors, Bethany Hostetler, Kim Walag and Tracy Lee, were surrounded by their team, who provided them with support on and off the court for the last four years.

What is it about the spandex?

Volleyball is unique because it is the only sport that fashions spandex as part of the uniform.

"Don't have them pulled up your butt, or down to your knees. Find a happy medium." Lindsay Sarvari, sophomore

"Spandex are more comfortable than regular shorts. It's more like they're part of your skin than your uniform." Sara Hallmark, sophomore

"At first I didn't like them because I thought they were too short, but now I think they are comfortable!" Meghan Thornton, freshman Rachel Bedford, sophomore, spikes the ball as she goes up strong against the Michigan City defense. Her 5'10" frame helps in the position she plays as middle hitter, making her a strong asset to the team.

On a road trip, the JV team has a little fun. "The bus rides are always a little random. Getting up at 6 a.m. on a Saturday morning and going to a tournament is always hard. You would think everyone would want to sleep the whole way, but we are fired up and having fun," said junior Grace Padgett.

Catic Parten and Kourtney Kemmerling, freshmen, go up strong together to block the tough Clay offense. It is important for two people to block together to take out more of the court.

Time outs are important because it gives the girls a chance to regroup. Coach John Sovinski always reminded the girls to play like the score was 0-0, even if they were winning. Before the JV team retakes the floor, they wrap up a time out with an enthusiastic "Team!"

Junior Grace Padgett and sophomore Lindsay Sarvari use teamwork to defend against a tough St. Joe offense. Blocking helps to slow down the ball and make it easier for the Penn defense to react. Staying close together creates less holes in the block, making it more efficient.

Abby Laidig, freshman, added another point to the Penn score by spiking the ball over the net. As a middle hitter, it is important for her to get lots of power behind her hits.

Freshman Kalyn Whitaker sacrifices one for the team by diving for a loose ball. To get a clean hit it is important to get underneath the ball.

As freshmen, this is the first year that these girls have played together. Bonding moments like these were abundant throughout the season as everyone became quick friends on and off the court.

Green as Grass

Before the season began there were many doubts surrounding the future of the girls' varsity basketball team. The team had lost four seniors and had only three returning players to the varsity roster. This lack of varsity experience and the missing confidence that usually surrounds the team only led to an increase in motivation and work by the six underclassmen and four upperclassmen that made up the girls' varsity basketball team. This season the team chemistry was electric. This unity led to an impressive record and a hopeful outlook for next year. The team ended their season with an impressive record of 14-8. Next season the team will be losing one very valuable senior, Maria Canfield, to graduation. Despite this loss the girls hope that next year they will continue improving. "Our goal is to go undefeated throughout next season and make it to the state finals," said sophomore Michele Reed. "We'll have almost everyone returning for next season so I think we'll have another fun and successful season," said junior Morgan Malone.

Sophomore Sarah Strachan plays close defense on her opponent during an intense game versus Fremont. "People doubted how good we would be this year since we had such a young team, but that only motivated us to work harder."

As a part of their pregame ritual the girls hold hands and listen to the National Anthem. Sophomore Michele Reed said that, "Being an underclassman on varsity makes me realize that next year I'm going to have big shoes to fill since our senior [Maria] was so great."

Freshman Lily Svete calls a play as she brings the ball upcourt. Svete said, "The best part of the season was team camp. Living together in the dorm rooms taught us a lot about each other and brought us together as a team."

Sophomore Emily Johnson works hard to pass the ball around her defender to a teammate. Johnson spent a large portion of the season out with an injury and said, "I think my injury was a step forward for the team because other girls were able to step up which built confidence."

Sophomore Alex Dunfee takes a shot through the hands of her defenders to contribute to another Kingsmen victory. "I really enjoy basketball because it's up-tempo. Practices are more intense and vigorous than other sports," commented Dunfee.

The girls take a moment to "team it up" before starting their game. "We only had one senior this season, which is rare, but Maria [Canfield] really stepped up and was a great leader. She always kept us focused and motivated before games," said junior Kelsey Whittaker.

Juniors Colombe Martin and Morgan Malone fight for a loose ball with a Fremont opponent. "The best part of this season were the team dinners and the team sleepovers. We had fun at practice too... as long as we played well," said Martin.

While we're young

The varsity girls' basketball coach, Dominic Ball, is known for using random phrases during the Lady Kingsmen practices and games. "While we're young" is one of Coach Ball's most frequently used sayings. He uses it when he's waiting for his players to move on to the next drill. Another well known phrase of his is, "Green as grass." He uses that one when referring to the age of his team. This year his team was young, fresh, and green as grass. Another popular phrase Coach Ball uses is, "Columbus took a chance." He says that when he wants his players to take more risks. The quote means if you take chances then good things can happen, just as they did for Columbus. Three more of the players' favorite quotes are, "Hydration is key," "Get on her like a cheap suit," and "We're in tall cotton." This year JV finished with a great record of 13-7. The leading scorer was center Lauren Brown averaging 7.1 points per game. The freshmen team ended with an outstanding record of 18-2. The leading scorer for the was Grace Barnes averaging 7.4 points per game.

Lindsey Miller, freshman, jumps high to win the jump ball. Miller took every jump for the freshman team this year and was successful on a majority of them.

Freshman guard Amanda Trimmer gets a steal and drives down the floor. Thanks to Trimmer the Lady Kingsmen will get two points on this possession.

Sophomore Anthea McCormick displays the standard defensive stance. This is McCormick's second year on the JV team.

The Penn boys' varsity basketball team came into the home fans. This was never more evident than on senior 2005-2006 season with high expectations. Led by a night, when the emotionally charged Kingsmen defeated passionate coach, Dean Foster, the Kingsmen soared a very talented Northwood team. The Kingsmen breezed above those expectations, and surprised even through their sectional, beating Mishawaka for the third themselves. "Coach Foster pushes us to do the work time, and avenging a regular season loss to Elkhart necessary to succeed. We wouldn't be the team we Memorial to win the sectional crown. In the pool, the girls' swim team managed to glide by most of their competition. This year, the girls' swim team were sectional champs, NIC champs, and tied with St. Joseph for 15th place in state. "It was one of our best years in the five years I've been coaching," Coach Dan Vogelgesang said. In the season, the team had a record of 11-2, making them early competitors for sectionals. Coach Vogelgesang prepped the team for success early in the year with a diligent training schedule, practicing each day from 6:00 am to 7:30 am, and 3:30 pm to 6:00 pm. Of course, there was a lot of reliance on some new faces: Penn's 2005-2006 girls swim team consisted of six seniors, four juniors, one sophomore, and ten freshmen. When sectionals arrived, six of the team's preliminary times were already ranked first and destined for victory. Winning with a score of 341, compared to Riley High School's score of 210, Penn took first place in the 200 yard Medley Relay, 100 yard Freestyle, 200 yard Freestyle Relay, and the 400 yard Freestyle Relay. With an outcome of 18-3, the Penn wrestling team dominated this season. "The only thing that they could control was their attitude towards working to be the best," said by Coach Henry Wilk. The team had a lot of success this year with many individuals achieving their goals. The freshman Steve Sandefer led the team with 31 pins almost breaking the old record held by Thomas Bemenderfer with 34. Derrick Jones had 67 near falls, and Andy Ginter received most improved. Penn went on having ten all conference wrestlers and four first team all NIC wrestlers. The four wrestlers who made it to state were Steve Sandefer with a record of 45-5, breaking the old school record with most wins. Jerimiah Maggart went 44-3 tying the old record. Mitch Miller went 40-6 and got pinned in the finals. Andy Ginter finished six overall with a record of 20-6. The last time Penn went to state as a team was 12 years ago (1995). Some other awards that were received by wrestlers were Mitch Miller who won Manchester, and Jon McCollester won tri-state.

Senior Mitch Miller does a turn over to score a point for his team. In wrestling, wrestlers do moves to score points during a match. Different moves are worth different amounts of points.

Freshman Steven Sandefer gets advice from his father before his 130 pound sectional match. As a freshman, Sandefer wrestled on the varsity team. Sandefer had a great year leading the team in most pins with 31, and most team points.

Senior Jon McCollester puts his opponent on his back and takes control over the match. When you talk about leadership, no one else's name is mentioned as much as his. Jon was a captain in football, and he also led the wrestling team.

Junior Jerimiah Maggart holds his opponent down on the mat, not allowing him to make a move. Maggart is one of the quicker wrestlers on the team and contributes many points to the team, ensuring their victories. Four wrestlers made the NIC first team roster; Steve Sandefer (7-0), Tom Petko (6-0), Mitch Miller (8-0), Jerimiah Maggart (8-0).. Second Team; Clint Miller (5-1), Jon McCollester (7-1).. Honorable mention went to Matt Gradeless, Mike Genovese, Chris Tanner, Travis Swihart, and Braxton Cave.

Senior Mickael Genovese tries to fake his opponent out before making a move. "Wrestling meant a lot to me over the last four years. I have come away with a lot of good memories that I am sure I will never forget," he said.

Junior Travis Swihart waits in the up starting position before continuing his match. Swihart wrestles in the 125 weight class. He stepped up a lot this year, and really looks forward to next years season.

Junior Clint Miller throws his opponent over his shoulder, then slams him on his back to get two points. Even though Miller is short, he can toss a few bodies and bust some heads.

Pinning the competition

Contact is the name of the game. The strive to be better than your opponent is crucial to be successful in this intense sport. The Penn JV wrestling team did just that this season. The many talented athletes all practiced and worked hard to achieve a great record of 21-3. Overall, it was a very enjoyable year as everyone worked hard, as they tried to be the best they could be. These athletes are looking forward to next year as they hope to be part of the varsity squad. They all know that this will require a lot of hard work, and time, but they are up for the challenge. Many of the wrestlers ended up having great records at the end of the year, and only hope to improve them next season. Coach Henry Wilk said, "During the season there were a lot of things that came up that they could not control, while the only thing that they could control was their attitude towards becoming the best wrestlers that they could be. They are all good guys who know that their hard work will serve all of them well for the future, regardless of whatever avenue they choose to pursue."

Freshman Colin Pestow handles his opponent well to take over the match. "My last year of middle school I was pumped about wrestling for Penn and I knew it would be tough, but not that tough. It was fun while it lasted but I'm always looking forward to next year, and hope to improve my record," quotes Pestow.

Sophomore Trent Musho shakes hands with his opponent before the start of his match. Each person does this before and after each time they wrestle to show their sportsmanship, and wish each other good luck before they start the match.

Junior Cole Kronewitter runs a half nelson on his opponent from Adams. This basic move is very effective when trying to gain control of your opponent and is a common move for many wrestlers. He thanks his coaches for teaching him the many wrestling techniques, and helping him perfect all of his great moves.

Sophomore Braxston Cave sets up to make a move on his opponent during their meet against Marian. He has learned a lot over the years from his former teammates, and has high hopes for the rest of the season and next year as he will be one of the upperclassmen and a strong leader.

Junior Nick Stith concentrates as he performs a move. He is part of the 180?? weight class, and has had a great season so far. Stith said he is looking forward to wrestling at the varsity level next year, and stepping up into the leadership role as a senior.

Freshman Andrew Waltz battles it out during the Mishawaka meet. Waltz is a great wrestler for the 160 weight class and has worked very hard this year. Waltz quoted, "This season was an enjoyable experience with a lot of good memories made, and I hope to always remember my teammates by them."

Sophomore Josh Patterson pins his opponent. Patterson wrestled in the 160 weight class and has made a significant contribution to the JV team this year. "Wrestling was fun this season, but it was a lot of hard work that all paid off in the end. I am looking forward to next year, and am aware of the intensity at the varsity level, but excited to work hard," quoted Patterson.

Train hard, win easy

The varsity baseball team proves that hard work and endless hours of dedication over the summer and winter months will eventually pay off when it counts. The team spent the majority of their summer practicing. In the winter the players motivated themselves to get out of bed and participate in morning conditioning before school. Not only did the team improve their skills during the off season, but they also developed tight friendships and team camaraderie which created strong team chemistry. The Kingsmen started off their season with a tough game against the number two ranked Laporte Slicers. Junior pitcher Brian VanDuyn was a key contributor for the varsity. This season, being his first year on varsity, he had a lot to say when comparing this team to past years'. "Team unity separates our team from the past. Nobody is selfish, that's what makes our team chemistry so good," he said.

Senior Ben Nehls was valuable to the varsity team this year despite his shoulder injury. However, this injury did not keep Nehls on the bench. "I knew this was our chance to make a statement, so I was going to do everything in my power to make sure I was there to do my part," said Nehls.

The varsity team gathers for a quick picture in the fitness center, where they spent most of their winter months preparing for the season. Junior Dustin Gosztola said, "We had good team chemistry due to the fact that we all hung out during the off-season and we were all good friends to begin with."

Junior Jarrod Rose became comfortable in his position as starting catcher for the varsity team during the 2006 season. A valuable asset for the team, Rose is confident as he anticipates the pitch from VanDuyn in their game versus Marian.

Senior Evan Sobecki looks for the signals before throwing heat to the Sturgis batter. Playing baseball at Penn for four years has allowed Sobecki to greatly enhance his skills. Sobecki made a significant contribution to the team each year.

Sophomore Steven Depositar runs back to the dug out adding another run for the Kingsmen. "Varsity baseball is very exciting. The team has really followed our number one rule: never let your teammates down. We are a very young team with low experience but the team concept wins us ball games," Depositar stated.

Juniors Brian VanDuyn and Jarrod Rose show their love for senior Dustin Zachary. "The thing that makes our team go are the friendships. Everyone on the team genuinely cares for and believes in one another," Zachary said.

Junior Matt Abel returns the ball to the pitcher after a successful double play versus Mishawaka. This was Abel's first year playing first base for varsity, and he learned, "Varsity baseball is a whole different level of competition compared to JV, and the girls also dig you a lot more if you play on varsity."

Swinging for the fence

It was a great year for both the freshmen and JV baseball teams. Not only were both of their records impeccable, but so was the work ethic of the athletes. Hard work and dedication enabled all of the athletes to put in good playing time, and get the much needed experience in order to play at the varsity level. "All of the guys really came together during the off-season and spring workouts. We are all pushed extremely hard to improve our skills by our

"This year our secret for success was taking each game one at a time and not looking past any game." Shelly Chlebowski, senior

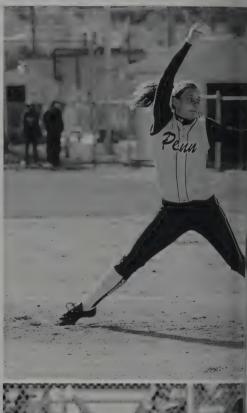

"The things I'll miss most are the individual friendships that I've built and seeing everyone at practice everyday." Lauren Edinborough, senior Dominating junior Kristi Lafree takes her stance in the batter's box and prepares to hit. Lafree was the leadoff batter and starting shortstop for the Lady Kingsmen this season.

Senior Jenna Story slides around Adams' catcher avoiding a tag in order to put the Lady Kingsmen ahead. "The Adams and Riley games were pivotal points of our season. They were NIC teams and we wanted to prove that we were the best," said Story.

The Lady Kingsmen softball team has the same ritual before every home game. The lineups are announced as everyone shakes hands and wishes the other team good luck. Then, the Lady Kingsmen hold hands and stand down the first base line as the National Anthem is played.

Junior Rachel Zirille hurls the ball with hopes of striking out another batter. Much of the team success was due to new coach Beth Zachary. "Coach Zach has helped me tremendously this season. She's been like my second mom," said Zirille.

Senior first baseman Sarah DeLong stretches out towards the ball as the runner tries to beat the throw. "Our season started with nervous anticipation, but once the games began we came together and each did our individual jobs to ensure a team victory," said DeLong.

Sophomore Alex Dunfee blocks a low ball from the pitcher. Dunfee was more than a key element for the Lady Kingsmen's offense and defense this season. She batted third in the line up and started at catcher. "Beating Lake Central helped jump start our season and lead to our future successes," said Dunfee.

Before all of the sectional games this season the parents of the Lady Kingsmen would make a tunnel and cheer for the girls as they ran to the field. "I'm going to miss all the time bonding outside of softball. We came together as a family throughout the season and worked hard while having fun," said senior Maggie Eggers.

At the start of each inning the Lady Kingsmen infielders meet at the mound to team it up before playing tough defense. This year the team was composed of seven seniors, five juniors, two sophomores and a freshman, which is not typical for the Lady Kingsmen roster.

Sliding home

The junior varsity softball team built very strong relationships within their team. The chemistry that they made off the field, like at team dinners, really helped them work well together on the field. The girls had a great season preparing them to hopefully make varsity softball next year. Their record, 23-1, has proven them to be a very strong team. All 13 girls contributed greatly to their team's success, along with coaches Ron "Papa Whit" Whittaker and Dave Westberg. The three juniors on the team were Nikki Gertzas, Ashley Kalman, and Susan Stevenson. These three individuals served as great leaders throughout the season for the younger team members. Over half of the team consisted of freshmen. The Lady Kingsmen beat their archrivals, the Mishawaka Cavemen, 2-1. They also beat Carmel 10-0, whom they have previously not beaten.

JOCK TALK

"Our team works really well together. We all have become really close friends." Nikki Gertzas, junior

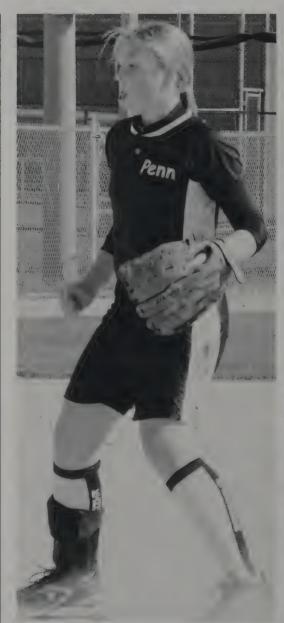

"I like being on the softball team because we are all really good friends, and we have fun on and off the field." Suzie Stevenson, junior

"I've been playing for nine years. It's a fun sport and we have good coaches. This was the best season ever, and we all had a lot of fun." Alicia Banicki, freshman

"The best part is the team dinners. We really bonded and it showed on the field." Ashley Kalman, junior

Freshman Kimberly McElhinny keeps her eyes wide open while preparing to catch the ball. McElhinny is a pitcher along with a first baseman. "Teamwork is the key to winning a game," said McElhinny.

The infield huddles up before every inning of the game to keep up good team morale. These girls have great connections and trust each other very well.

Sophomore Monica Palicki runs to first base after a hit. When Palicki wasn't on the mound pitching, she played first base for the Lady Kingsmen.

Grace Barnes, freshman, battles against the St. Joe Indians pitcher. The Lady Kingsmen went on to beat the Indians 11-1 putting their record 17-0.

Freshman Kim McElhinny fires a fastball to the plate. McElhinny pitches along with sophomore Monica Palicki.

Samantha Farber, sophmore, prepares to bat. She kicks at the dirt before batting. Farber is a catcher along with a third basemen. "Softball is a fun sport and I have made some great friends while playing," said Farber

Sophomore Monica Palicki sets herself up before the pitch at first base. "My favorite part was going to the tournament in Carmel on the bus. We beat them for the first time 10-0, so the bus ride home was real fun," said Palicki

Freshman Grace Barnes was leading to home plate. "Getting on base is my favorite part. I get all caught up in the excitement and it's a great feeling," says Barnes.

Putting greens and lean machines

This years boys' golf team was definitely in the swing of things. Penn played against one of their biggest rivals, Marian, at the Kaeppler Memorial golf tournament. "The teams are just so well matched. There are a lot of really great players on both teams. There were a lot of big shots made out there today," said coach Terry Tulchinsky to the South Bend Tribune. At the NIC meeting, Penn won over Marian, again, by only one stroke. According to the Tribune, over the season Penn consistently had at least four golfers scoring 80 or below. Tulchinsky praised several players in the Tribune after the NIC match. "[Brian] Kiraly is one of the hardest workers I have ever seen and the last couple of weeks it has really paid off," he said. At the SB Country Club Invitational, which was on the day of prom, Kiraly earned compliments from both Tulchinsky and Marian coach Jim Kryder. Tulchinsky said, "Not to take anything away from any of the rest of our players today, but Brian really stepped up today and made a difference." Kryder agreed, saying, "Kiraly really was the difference." Ben Belville told the Tribune, "Maybe it [prom] gave me something else to think about. Today, there were very good conditions and I struck the ball well." Sometimes the rain interrupted and canceled matches, which resulted in "pour" performances, but the Kingsmen overcame wet conditions to shine on.

JOCK TALK

"I like to play for Penn because I like the higher competition level, and the possible scholarship opportunities." Ben Bellville, junior

"I really like my teammates this year. We all get along. . .most of the time." Adam Stump, sophomore

"Freshmen have to wait to golf so I didn't get to do as much, but it'll be better next Nick Shappell, freshman

Sophomore Ben Stephan takes a mighty swing before a game. "Golfing isn't just luck, you have to practice a lot and make sure that you know the course," said Stephan.

Junior Ben Sheyko practices his swing at the Juday Creek golfing range. Juday Creek is the team's home golf course, and also where they hold their practices

Junior Steve Spiritoso gets lined up for a putt. At the Kaeppler Golf Tournament, Spiritoso had a tough time figuring out what to do on the 18th hole when his ball landed less than three feet away from the clubhouse. He was able to get himself out of his jam and tied for third with a 77.

Sophomore Bryan Olund taps the ball in the cup during a pregame warm up. It is important that the boys have both long distance and short distance skills. The putting range is a good way to practice short distance.

Sophomore Adam Stump swings at the driving range. The many hours spent practicing at the driving range really payed off for Stump this season. "I like to golf. It's my sport," stated Stump.

Junior Mike Goodrich kneels to get his ball. "Golf is a very challenging sport, both mentally and physically. It can be frustrating sometimes, but it's a lot of fun when you play well." Goodrich said. He has been playing golf for ten years and has been on the Penn golf team for three.

Sophomore Adam Stump, freshman Shane Eagan, junior Joey Marosz, and coach Terry Tulchinsky discuss different topics before the boys have to golf. "Before I could walk I could swing a club," said Eagan.

Junior Rory Langton lines up a put before taking a swing. Langton went onto the Kaeppler Golf Tournament where Penn took first.

Causing A Racket!

"Love hurts." In tennis, "love" means "zero." The girls' tennis team's green shirts stated this on the back, and it was true for their opponents--most of the time. Penn destroyed their NIC opponents, yet finished a disappointing third, losing to Elkhart Central in a tough battle. "It was heartbreaking," MacKenzie Austgen, sophomore, said. "They could adjust to different weather conditions and defend all our strategies." While most of the season enjoyed really warm temperatures, the end saw rain outs and indoor matches. It is challenging to adjust to playing indoors. The ball goes at different speeds and bounces differently, since playing outside has wind interference. Other season highlights included conversing on long bus rides to Lawrence Central in Indianapolis and Munster. The team wore green tights to school during the first round of sectional play. From a rooster mask at Fun F/X they coined the phrase, "Do it for the rooster," which became their motivation. They won against Adams, 4-1, to make it to the sectional championship, where they lost by the same score. They are a young team, however, losing only two varsity seniors to graduation, Jenny Hummer and Lisa Garatoni, and will come back strong.

JOCK TALK

"Even though we lost to Marian in the sectionals we still have good hearts and are the bestest of friends."

Lizzie Clark, junior

Our team was very close. We always knew how to cheer each other up. We won't remember the scores, but we will remember memories." MacKenzie Austgen, sophomore

"We were a young team--a good group of kids who listened and improved."

Vaughn Smith, coach

"The season was a lot of fun. We worked hard and it paid off in close matches."

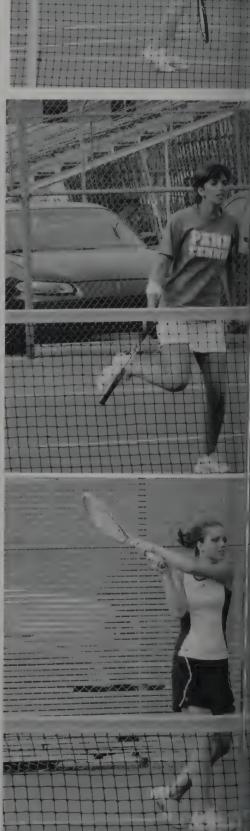

Cara Pond, sophomore

Katie Kuehl, senior, hits the tennis ball with a strong forehand. Kuehl and the team lost to Marian in the sectionals, which ended their run for sixteen straight NIC championships in seventeen years.

Lizzie Clark, junior, delivers a fierce backhand against her opponent. Clark lost only a few matches this season. She has played varsity since her freshman year.

Seniors Jenny Hummer and Lisa Garatoni converse with each other after a point is scored. When in doubles play each person relies on their counterpart to help them suceeed. Both will compete in Sports Fest, a city-wide athletic competition for the best graduates. Despite close losses to Marian, their seasons were successful.

Annie Bernacchi, sophomore, was 6-3 on JV. It was her first year at Penn, having moved from, Salt Lake City, Utah. "I got better as the season went on," she said, "I either crushed my opponents, or got crushed."

MacKenzie Austgen, sophomore, who alternated between #1 and #2 doubles, waits to resume play while the other team talks with their coaches. "I like playing doubles because there's always someone out there to help you out," she said. Her partner for most of the season was fellow sophomore Sophie Lauer.

JV players, Leah Richman, sophomore, and Danni Harper, junior, cheer on their teammates at the Elkhart Central NIC match. Harper transferred from Riley before the 2006 season. Richman has a freshman sister, Jenna, who is also on Penn girls' tennis team.

Heather Anderson, sophomore, #1 singles on varsity, gets pumped to win her next point against her opponent. Anderson frequently played against the top players in state, such as Munster.

Cara Pond, sophomore, is #2 singles. "CP" has one of the best backhands on the team, placing the ball wherever she wants on the court.

A common goal

With his young athletes, coach Brad Robertson and the boys' track team have accomplished more than expected this season. Finishing third in the NIC meet, the Kingsmen were forced to put their bad luck behind them and step up to the task ahead. Plagued with injuries this season, the team went a large portion of the season without a few of their top scorers. "The Penn track team was very young. We suffered two early losses in the conference but were able to beat the undefeated St. Joe Indians in our last conference meet," commented Robertson. "I think that showed the willingness of the boys to work hard throughout the season and improve right through the state series." Despite the difficult season, several of the events performed well in Sectionals and moved on to the Kokomo Regional meet. Two members of the team, junior Clint Miller and sophomore Will Crane, made the trip down to Bloomington to compete in the IHSAA State Finals. Miller achieved eighth place in the 100m dash and ninth place in the 200m dash. Although Crane did not medal, he still has two years to achieve this goal.

"We had a very inexperienced team this year, but as the season progressed everyone stepped up to the competition."

Mike Levy, senior

"Track is an individual sport and your success really comes down to the amount of effort you put into practice."

Brice Wozniak, junior

"It's nice to go out to practice and see all the guys willing to work so hard for the same goal, and the good of the team."

Ryan Brechtl, junior

"Even though I wasn't able to compete this season, I used my injury to my advantage and was able to help out the other guys on the team."

Jerry Schultz, senior

In one of the toughest races of the meet, junior Brandon Miller breezes by the competition. After running in the 400m dash and being a member of the 4x400m relay, Miller was drained by the time the meet closed. "I always try to run the first race smart, but the second race is all gut because I'm so tired. It's always hard on your body, but I know it's getting me into better shape for the next meet," said Miller.

Junior hurdler John Stscherban worked hard to help contribute to another Kingsmen victory. "Even though it was my first year, I felt like I was able to catch on quickly and make a good contribution to the team," said Stscherban.

NN KINGSMEN

Junior Clint Miller dominated the 200m dash finals at the NIC track meet. Miller's speed racked up consistent weekly points for the Kingsmen in the 100m and 200m dashes, along with the 4x100m relay. "I finished out the season pretty well, and I'm ready for next year to start. I'm hungry for a state championship," said Miller.

The tough competition seen this season was no problem for junior Phil Johnson. "I was surprised that our 4x800 team made it to regionals because at the beginning of our season we weren't at our best," said Johnson.

Raw talent isn't everything, as junior Milton Redwine has learned. In addition to his natural ability to dominate in the high jump, Redwine has spent many hours perfecting his form. "As you get older everything becomes harder. There is more responsibility and higher expectations to improve when having the Captain position," he said.

The accomplishments kept coming for sophomore Will Crane. Finishing first place in the 1600m run at the Kokomo Regionals and earning a spot at the State Finals, were only a few. "The beginning of the season was rough, my times weren't very great," said Crane, "but I came a long way and now I have higher expectations for next year."

Senior Yousef Abu Gharbieh soared over the high jump bar at the NIC track meet. "Coach always told me to get my head back but the less I thought about it, the better I did," he said. Four years of Penn track has made Abu Gharbieh one of the top jumpers on the team.

A combination of strength, good form, and concentration are what make senior Ben Jones a successful shot put thrower. "Track is more than a team sport," said Jones, "it's pushing yourself and others past your body's physical limitations." Jones has provided the team with a steady flow of points this season.

All for George

Coming up only twelve points short of an NIC victory was plenty of incentive for the Penn girls' track team to show the rest of the area how strong they really were. After finishing second in the Northern Indiana Conference meet, the Kingsmen responded by claiming the sectional title for the second year in a row. Realizing early what it would take to have a winning season, the team went at their grueling training with little complaining. Even the Saturday morning work outs didn't phase the girls, as long as head coach Tracy Megyesi's dog, George, was in attendance.

George has been with most of the girls since they began high school track, and is always willing to run a few warm-up laps with them. "This was a very exciting season," said Coach Megyesi, "Losing fifteen seniors last year was tough but the girls all worked really hard to accomplish the goals ahead and we had amazing leadership from all of the upperclassmen." Proving the talent and depth of the team, girls from five different events qualified for the State Finals at the Indiana University in Bloomington.

JOCK TALK

"We're an awesome team and we're such good friends. Even outside of practice and meets we're hanging out together." Alyssa Johnston, sophomore

"Even coming in as a freshman this year I really felt like I belonged to the team, we were all so supportive of each other." Leeann Kuehn, freshman

"Being on varsity as a sophomore has been a great experience for me. It's given me a head start on the competition I will see next year."

Lura Henninger,

Freshman Jackie Tachman proved to be an amazing addition to the team, constantly improving her times in the 800m run and the 4x800m relay. "I enjoyed the jump from middle school to high school competition because it was more intense which I think helped me better myself as a person and a runner."

Senior Katie Sill stares straight ahead to the finish line in the 100m hurdles, focusing only on getting there ahead of the other competitors. "My goal was to make it to the finals at regionals and I did. I never thought it would be this sad at the end," said Sill.

INSMEN

Christine Cummings and Sarah Hutchings took one last minute to prepare themselves for the grueling race ahead of them. "I didn't accomplish my personal goals this season, but I enjoyed being a leader for the younger distance runners," Cummings said. With the small distance group, both girls ran at least two tough races in each meet.

After an amazing career, senior Chelsea Slaggert has no regrets. One of the top 300m hurdlers in the area, Slaggert is also an important part of the 4x400m relay team. "I love how during school we all have our different friends, but when we come to practice, it's like no one else matters. Everything we do is for each other."

Junior Brooke Healy was given the Most Improved in field award this year, and she proved that she deserved it every meet she competed in. "I was happy with getting to regionals, next year I hope to improve my personal best and possibly make it to State." Senior Liz Zaseck flies through the air and lands hard in the sand pit of Mishawaka High School at the Princess City Relays. In addition to earning points in the long jump, Zaseck provided the Kingsmen with points in the 300m and 100m hurdles. "Making it to state in the 100's has been a goal of mine since my first season at Penn, and to be able to share it with other seniors was the best."

Seniors Chelsea Slaggert, Liz Zaseck, and Lindsay Johnston, along with junior Ali Beaudway and sophomore Lindsay Sarvari, were the five girls traveling down to Bloomington to compete in the State Finals. While Beaudway was the only one to receive a medal, placing fourth in the high jump, all of the girls were able to compete well and share the last meet of the season together.

Clearing the high jump bar with room to spare is no new thing for senior Lindsay Johnston. Along with the high jump, Johnston has made a permanent name for herself in the pole vault. "Making it to State four years and medaling in three was one of my greatest achievements. State is always the highlight of the season, especially this year, having two other seniors there with me."

Sprinting to State

Seniors Peggy Wefald, Hayley Baker and Shannon Nutting were the captains of this year's lacrosse team. "Playing this year has really made me excited for next year. Even though I won't be playing with the same team I hope to find the same friendship, love, and loyalty that I have experienced with this team, especially this year," Wefald said. "It's definitely a love/hate relationship on this team...mostly love" commented Baker. Wefald will play at Mount Holyoke in Massachusetts and Baker is planning to assist the Penn team next year while attending IUSB.

The team brings it in for a cheer after a time out against Culver. This year Penn defeated Culver twice.

Aleece Weade, junior, Kourtney Bauswell and Kelly McDonough, both seniors, take a break in between games at the Northern Regionals. Despite the chilly day, the team went 3-0 at the tournament. "This season was great! Our hard work and dedication led us to an undefeated regular season, but our teamwork and friendship led us to our state Freshman Sarah Feely has been playing lacrosse since fifth grade. Her skill, endurance and positive attitude have made her a great addition to the team.

Sarah Wisler, junior, wins a draw against Illinois' Herniation. "We're all in this together and we love to take a bath," declared Wisler.

Seniors Stephanie Orosz and Naina Singh chow down on some pizza after winning their first game against Carmel at the state championship. The team was ranked first in state; however, they lost the championship game to Park Tudor.

Senior Susan Molnar enjoys a root beer and an abundance of good food at one of the team dinners. This year the team dinner trend was playing tackle football.

Shannon Nutting, senior, defends a midfield transition against Culver. Nutting, along with Bauswell and Wefald, led the team as the top scorers Clara Bennett, senior, and Janice Rottenberg, junior, run a tight defense around senior goalie Sarah Popovich's crease. "If not for lacrosse, I might never have met any of these girls. After playing with them for four years I know I have made irreplaceable friendships and memories that will last me a lifetime." stated Bennett.

Hiromi Sakurai and Key Tongbaiyai, both seniors, smile on the sidelines. Both girls are exchange students this year and have enjoyed learning how to play lacrosse. "When I get back to Japan I want to start a lacrosse team at my high school!" said Sakurai.

Rucking Their Way To Nationals

The boys' rugby team lost a lot of great seniors last year, and weren't expected to be nearly as competitive. But after a rocky start to the season, they proved that theory wrong, punishing opponent after opponent. With hard physical play, the team ground out victory after victory, losing only four games. The season culminated at Nationals in New Hampshire, where the team placed fifth overall, proving once again that the team is a national dynasty. The season was highlighted with a lot of individual success as well. Five players were selected for developmental national teams in their age groups. Of those five, junior Kyle Toombs and last-year senior Conrad Bontrager were selected for the Junior National Team which competed in the World Championships in Dubai, Saudi Arabia. The season was certainly one to remember, and the team will almost certainly continue their legacy of success in the following year.

JOCK TALK

"Being a team captain meant a lot of new responsibilities. We were role models to the other players and helped the team adjust to a new season. Paul Yoder, senior

"I had a lot of fun. It was a great season." Nathan Lang, senior

"This year I was the only returning starter; it was a big change but the team came together well. We had a good leadership and had an awesome season."

Kyle Toombs, junior

Freshman Steven Sandefer and junior Eric Nagy jog across the field, warming up for the looming match. Sprinting, changing directions, and taking hard hits are all part of rugby, so it's important for the players to stay loose and avoid injury.

Senior Ryan Gizewski fields the ball following a scrum and prepares to lay the ball off to a teammate. All passes in rugby must be lateral and backwards, and are thrown underhand, much different from traditional pass styles seen in American football.

Freshman Josh Levan pummels down the pitch looking for the end zone. If Levan gets there, he scores a try, which is five points in rugby. The other two points come from the extra kick, which is placed 22 meters out from where the try is scored.

The team waits as Derick Neubauer, senior, kicks the ball off to the other team. The team didn't have to kick the ball off that often, only losing four games during the season. Such a record is a tribute to the dynasty the club is forming.

Seniors Derick Neubauer and Ryan Gizewski take a break to relax. Long hours of hard physical work, along with getting schoolwork finished, is very demanding on the players, but they still manage to have a great time. Sophomore Kyle Overstreet tries to catch the ball during a line out. When the ball goes out of bounds, the other team gets a line out, where they attempt to throw the ball to the other team. Overstreet's height and reach made him a great candidate for catching line outs.

Senior Ryan Frick catches the ball that was kicked by the opposing team. After Penn scores a try, the other team gets to kick the ball back to the Kingsmen, as field position is considered more advantageous than possession of the ball. The Kingsmen returned a lot of kicks, as they were a try-scoring machine.

Kyle Toombs, junior, pumps his powerful legs straight into the belly of the other team's defense. Toombs is the only junior captain and the only returning starter this year, and his experience and talents earned him a spot on the US national team, an incredible achievement.

One more "try"

The girls warm up before a game at the Moose Lodge. Typically, the team divides into backline and forwards to practice before a game. The Moose Lodge in Elkhart is home to both the boys' and girls' rugby teams.

Nicole Davis, senior, runs onto her opponent during a game. If she happens to get stopped by her offender she has a teammate nearby to pass to.

Janell Blunt, senior, properly tackles her defender. Blunt was one of six seniors on the team this year. This was her third season playing and every year has gotten better than the previous one.

Heather Barnett, sophomore, lifts her teammate in a line out. A line out happens when the ball is kicked or goes out of bounds. The team that did not make the ball go out of bounds throws the ball in between both players being lifted.

The team huddles in the middle of the field after their game. The girls always huddle after a game to do a cheer whether they win or lose. It brings the team closer together.

Kara Fick, junior, warms up her kicking before a game. The girls enjoy perfecting their kicking skills because it is something other than the usual running and passing.

Seniors Cassie Anderson and Janell Blunt team up to stop their opponent. Both of the girls were successful in doing so. The girls were significant factors to the team with their defense.

Abbie Briggs, junior, receives the ball out of a scrum from Lyndsey Bennett, sophomore, and is looking to pass to the backline. Briggs played scrum-half this year which was a new position for her and she managed to do a great job. She will be back for her final year.

The forwards on the team perform a scrum during one of their games. The play is used if there is a penalty. The ball is tossed in the center of the scrum where both teams battle to get it back to their side of the scrum.

Reflections on a great season

Good times to be remembered

"The best part about this year was how the seniors have become best friends. We shared a special bond and I will really miss them next Katie VanDePutte, senior

"I had a lot of fun this year with the seniors, and I am looking forward to being a senior next year and having another exciting season.' Christina Dean, junior

"We worked hard this year to get everyone on the same level and improve our stunting abilities. We worked so well together and have made a lot of memories." Stephanie Strasser, senior

"I always look forward to the team dinners on Thursdays. We have so much fun and get to eat amazing food! There's nothing else like it. Cara McGuin, junior

Laughter is about the only thing you can hear when around the seniors. These girls know how to have fun and work hard at the same time. They really enjoyed their last year of cheering together.

The girls' excited attitudes can't be hidden as they travel to the first away game. "The bus rides are always so much fun. We are always singing or playing an unusual game," said Jenny Hummer,

The varsity cheerleaders show off their stunt, "Paper Doll," which is a line of connected heel-stretches. This stunt requires a lot of balance and flexibility from the flyers.

The JV and varsity cheerleaders bunch together for a picture at their last game before sectionals. This game, like many others, was very cold, but they didn't let that bother them as they cheered on the Kingsmen.

The junior girls get the crowd pumped up as they cheer as loud as they can. This was their first year on varsity, and their great attitudes and abilities contributed a lot to the team.

Senior flyers Kylene Buczynski, Shannon Summers, and Stephanie Doyle, along with junior flyer Bridgette Hill, impress the crowd with their upside down mount at the start of the second half.

The girls pose for the camera as they begin their third day at NCA camp. They are dressed up for crazy day. This spirited bunch won the spirit award, as well as many others.

"Go Penn!" The girls cheer on their team and are all smiles as the players take their place on the field. This is one of the most exciting parts of the game.

Stunt 101

just a brief explanation of being a cheerleader. This is what the crowd and the cheerleader's classmates and peers see, but there is a lot more to cheering than this. The cheerleaders seem to form a family-like bond. They support each other in every aspect of life. This is easily understood considering some of the girls have been on the same squad together for several years now. Even the girls that only met at tryouts usually form a good "friend for life" relationship

Long practices, late nights, hot summer days, at their annual UCA camp. This is where all the glitter, drama, bloomers, ribbons and smiles are fun begins. The cheerleaders are given a calendar for summer that has exercises and routines they can be working on before the busy season begins. When school finally starts it can get pretty hectic for the girls with practices, tumbling lessons, games a couple times a week, and homework! But some how, the 51 cheerleaders never seem to let the school down. With their cheering, smiles, positive attitudes, laughter, and kindness they keep Penn's spirit loud and proud!

Golden Smiles

"This year being on junior varsity we've gotten to know a lot of varsity girls--that was really fun!" Taylor Bolin, sophomore

"Being a freshmen cheerleader was a great experience. I'm looking forward to it next year!" Stephanie Banas, freshmen

"I made a lot of friends and for the most part it has been fun, but we still had to work hard and deal with all of the drama." Michael Wills, junior

Olivia Rink, freshman, shows off her flexibility while cheering on the freshmen football team. Rink says, "Being launched up in the air can be very scary, but at the same time it's a thrill and I love seeing how happy the crowd is!"

Sophomores Kelsey Mast, Lauren Brown, Claire Viater, Rachel Malin, and Nakia Parmalee pass out spirit sticks before one of varsity's big games. They give items such as these to the crowd so they can make noise before the kickoff.

The JV cheerleaders are aligned and cheering at the JV game vs. Mishawaka. A few nights before at the varsity game vs. Mishawaka the fans all held their breath in hopes of a great victory. The scoreboard didn't let us down!

The JV cheerleaders are up and shouting GO PENN GO! This is one of the cheers that the crowd usually starts and is favored by all the students. It's another great example of Penn's pride!

Sophomores Dani Wilson, Rachel Malin, Lauren Harrell, Taylor Bolin and Lauren Brown step back to let the flag come down the track and pay honor to our country by singing the National Anthem.

The JV cheerleaders use props such as a white picket fence and a big gold D as they cheer on he varsity football team. They always think of something creative to get the crowd up and ready to cheer on the football team.

The freshmen cheerleaders get together for a picture between cheering. They are all bundled up because the temperatures are finally dropping to the average fall weather. Chelsea Doyle, freshman, states, "It's harder to cheer in the cold because we have to layer on more clothing. It makes moving our arms and tumbling a lot harder, but in the end, it's all worth it!"

The freshmen show off just one of their many great stunts at a game. Most of the girls' smiles fade as they are being tossed up into the air with nervousness, but once they are stable with their knees locked into place, their golden smiles and cheering return.

Penn stars in action

Henry Wilk takes the time to pump up team captain, sophomore Mandip Singh, as he picks his team for an intense game of volleyball. Wilk and health teacher, Chris Simper, look forward to their fourth hour gym class, as the students in this class can always find a way to brighten their day.

Sophomore Charlie Olson sits patiently in dance class as he watches the next set of motions in their current dance. Olson loves participating in dance. With a little help from his peer leader, junior Lindsay Dunlap, he can hit all of the moves. Olson will also be preforming in the 2006 Dance Classic at the end of the year, to show off everything he has Freshman Kylie Ross knows that it is very important to stretch out before participating in any physical activities in her gym class. Ross loves the games the group gets to play in class, and is looking forward to them in her next three years at Penn.

Seniors Kelly Roth and Shawn Kawka, along with sophomore Mandip Singh and freshman Jacob Derrickson, show their excitement to finally be out of the classroom and in the gymnasium. Health teacher, Chris Simper, has exceeded the teacher-student relationships with these kids; it is obvious her friendship has left impressions on these students that will last far beyond graduation.

Senior Shawn Kawka shows off his muscles as he lifts the "big pink ball" over his head without even breaking a sweat. Kawka's personality is nearly irresistible and gym class is not the only time he has this big smile on his face. Kawka was a part of the 2005-2006 yearbook staff and his optimistic attitude was contagious to all the other staff members. In his own way he relieved a lot of tension that comes along with the production of the yearbook.

Freshman Kylie Ross, junior David Burnside, sophomore Charlie Olson, and freshmen Jacob Derrickson and Quinn Voorde all wave good-bye as they depart for an exciting day at Coveleski Stadium. The Silver Hawks' game is just one of the events planned for the students throughout the year, an experience many of the students will never forget.

Peer Leader Megan Day encourages freshman Evan Preston to make sure he's all stretched out before participating in the daily activities. This particular gym class can get very competitive throughout the games and the students' never-ending energy supply can make it hard for the peer leaders to keep up.

Freshman Quinn Voorde enjoys his turn on the new big bike. The students love the new addition to their gym equipment this year. It's a great way to have fun while still getting plenty of exercise. The bike especially fits the needs of those students who have limited leg mobility, helping them to gain the leg strength they need.

Let's Dance on Broadway

Dressed as maids, sophomores Brittany Chamness, Tiffany Vargo, and Erin Noonan from Jennifer Wolfe's gold 1 and gold 3 classes were part of the Beauty and The Beast dance. Noonan comments, "This was my first year in dance and definitely a fun one. I wasn't expecting our production to be

Many students from all grades dance together in Jennifer Wolfe's "Jailhouse Rock" dance. The students started the dance with their backs facing the audience and once they turned around there was a roar of laughter within the crowd once they saw Senior Kayla Jaworski performs to "Hallelujah," a beautiful modern piece. In almost every performance there were props used just as this scarf to add more movement to the special song.

Clare Kopec, sophomore, dances to "Bust This," choreographed by Jennifer Wolfe. Kopec comments, "The dance performances are always the best time of the year so you can see what everybody's accomplished and what everybody's been working towards."

Sophomores Lauren Harrell and Logan Haney were dancing partners in "Boogie Woogie Bugle Boy." This dance was preformed by combined students in Denise Sanders-Honaker's gold 1 and gold 4 classes. The students wore hats and ties and ended the dance with a salute to the Statue of Liberty behind them.

Breanna Nemeth and Samantha Sojka, both sophomores, get ready to go on stage and dance to The Pajama Game. This was a dance performed by Denise Sanders-Honaker's black 3 and gold 1. Sojka comments, "I really enjoyed my first year in dance. It was fun dancing with other girls who share the same interest in dance as I

Tony Furnas, senior, along with other combined advanced dancers from year two students dance together in "Bust This." Furnas is a student assistant and says. "Dance at Penn was a great experience, I'll miss it next year!"

Combined students dance together in "Superstition." The students were from Denise Sanders-Honaker's blocks black 1, 2 and 3 which were advanced classes. This was a traditional tap performance.

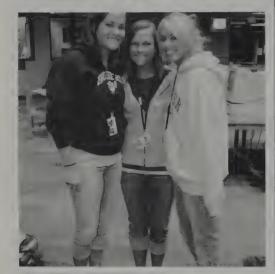

Seniors Kylene Buczynski and Kate Vandeputte along with sophomores Breanna Nemeth and Samantha Sojka dance together in "Pump It." Busczynski and Vandeputte were both dance assistants and both agree that dance was one of their favorite classes while they were at Penn.

Seth Curtis, senior, is known for his good style. Curtis usually sports the popped collar look and always has his diamond earrings in. Curtis explains, "I like to look good for the ladies.'

Senior Amber Mitchell is wearing layers, holey jeans, and long necklaces. Holey jeans have become very popular this year although they are not permitted if the holes are above the knee.

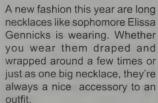

Junior Kara Fick and sophomores Stephanie Majerek and Breanna Kedik are all wearing cuffed capris. The girls laughed as they said, "We're all wearing sweat shirts, but I guess as long as we have on our cuffed capris, we're fashionable!"

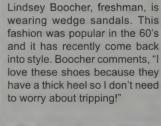

Melissa Whittaker, sophomore, is wearing the very popular and original clogs. Clogs seem to come back year after year. They are great because you can wear them with anything and everything; they also come in a nice variety of colors and styles.

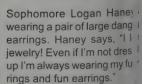

Junior Adam Weaver is wearing girl jeans. A lot of boys have been wearing girl jeans this year with no reason to it. Weaver comments, "It's just something I tried and I liked it.'

Latest Trends At Penn

Penn students talk about newest styles of the year

Camouflage prints have become very popular this year for both boys and girls. Junior Kelsey Whitaker and freshman Mitchell Miller both are wearing camouflage. Whitaker is wearing a skirt and Miller is wearing shorts. This fun print also comes in gauchos, capris, pants, and jackets.

Dawn Prior, junior, is wearing a crop top. Crop tops are very cute and they come in every style and color. Sophomore Claire Viater sits in the sewing classroom with her highly fashionable oversized shades. Viater comments, "I'm the only one in class whose seat is in the sun so having my sunglasses in my purse comes in handy!"

Sophomore Nicole Matson is wearing the very popular gauchos. Matson states, "I love my gauchos because I can dress them up or down." Freshman Stephanie Seese is wearing a jean skirt and leggings. This has been a new look this year. Girls have worn every color of leggings from plain black and gray to bright hot pink and lime green.

Samantha Alderding, sophomore, is wearing plaid long shorts. Girls wearing long shorts has become more popular throughout the years. Sophomore Erin Crawford is wearing a tie-dye tee. She is also wearing long necklaces and a bangle bracelet. These sorts of shirts are known as graphic tee's.

Sophomore Caitlyn Paulsen carries an oversized bag as one of her greatest fashion accessories. "I love my bag because it can hold everything from my notebooks and binders to my lip gloss and iPod, plus, it's cute!"

lyers have become very pular since summer. Most girls e to layer a tank top or two to ake their shirts look longer like phomore Becky Breske. eske adds, "It's a cute look that in add a lot of color to your itfit."

Brittany Hedman, sophomore, is wearing beaded sandals. This style of sandals may be totally flat, however, with the bright colors and beads, it adds a lot to an outfit.

This year pearls have come back into style. Some girls purchase them while others receive pearls from their grandmas. Whether it's a single strand like freshman Jessica Bolinger, or a few different necklaces with a variety of sizes, it's a nice way to look charming and sophisticated at the same time.

Sophomore Dana Stevens has her hair in a ponytail and has her side bangs pulled back to something called the "hair poof". Stevens says, "I'm trying to grow my hair out so pulling my bangs back is nice so they stay out of my face."

Seniors Whitney Lamb and Nicole Botich take a second out of class to frame a set of matching pink outfits that two teachers, two nurses, one student, and one secretary commented on during one class period.

Seniors Cassie Hahn and Allie Sulok, sophomores Christin Eby and Eryn Edinborough, and junior Jessie Burnham exemplify pirate day at color guard practice.

Senior Nick Hrybyk practices with the band playing the baritone.

As the year comes to a close, everyone starts looking forward to the future. Of course, everyone is waiting for the days at the beach and no homework for the summer. The freshmen look forward to being sophomores, because they'll no longer be freshmen (and no PE). Sophomores look ahead because then they're upperclassmen and they can drive to school. As usual, the juniors are looking forward to the fall because they will be seniors and in their last year of school. Yet, do the seniors look forward to the fall? For the most part, it means college...four more years of studying and classes. For others, it means starting their career. Looking ahead can be exciting, exhilarating, yet it always brings everything you never expected.

Finally, after many long hard

Finally, we have made it to the end of the year. Advice from one generation has spread to the other. Freshmen: your journey is just beginning. You will meet many more people and friends along the way. Sophomores: it's a bumpy ride trying to break into your identity, but hold on tight because it's well worth the trouble. Juniors: don't wish away the rest of high school. Before you know it, 180 days will turn into just one. Time flies when you're busy and having fun (and even when you're not having fun). Live it up. Seniors: you're finished. You are living your memories right now. As you leave the halls of Penn, remember the good times, and learn from the bad. The rest of your life is what you make it, but it may be everything you never expected.

As we grow and learn about what high school is all about, we expand our horizons in every direction. We developed the nevers of our four years. No matter how many times we said we would never do, say, think, or forget something, our ideas always managed to change. There are those people at this school that we will never pass in the hallways. There are the grades that we will never make, whether it be A+'s or F's. The peer pressure we will never fall into. The friends we swore we would never forget. All the things we never expected. The last lesson seniors learned: never say never.
